MOTHER'S WAY.
On within our little cottage,
As the shadows gently fall,
While the sunlight touches softly,
One sweet face upon the wall,
Do we gather close together,
And in hushed and tender tone,
Ask each other for forgiveness,
For the wrong that each has done,
Should you wonder at the custom,
At the ending of the day,
Eye and voice would quickly answer,
"It was once our mother's way."

If our home be bright and cheery,
If it hold a welcome true,
Opening wide its door of greeting,
To the many, not the few;
If we share our Father's bounty,
With the needy, day by day,
'Tis because our hearts remember,
This was ever mother's way.

Sometimes when our hearts grow weary,
Our tasks seem very long,
When our burdens look too heavy,
And we deem the right all wrong,
Then we gain a new, fresh courage,
As we rise to proudly say,
"Let us do our duty bravely,
This was our dear mother's way."

This we keep our memory precious,
While we never cease to pray
That, at last, when lengthening shadows,
Mock the evening of our day,
They may find us calmly waiting,
To go home our mother's way.

Selected Story.ONE LOYAL HEART.

"Then you will not help her?" said Geoffrey Brandon.

Hilda de Vere curled her beautiful lip scornfully. Hers was a royal type of beauty, and it was no wonder that men loved her so madly.

Geoffrey Brandon eyed her narrowly, and there crept over his handsome face a look of admiration, which the girl was not slow to perceive, and the disdainful curve of her perfect lip rounded into a sunny smile, as she said:

"But why should I quarrel about her, cousin Geoffrey? Suffering or not, she is as highly in her low position as she was when the mistress of a half a million, and I do not care to encounter her insolent pride again, even at your request, my dear friend. No doubt some of her many admirers will assist her, so why should I trouble myself?"

Hilda de Vere looked the noble man before her with all the power she possessed of loving anything beyond herself, and had she known her last cruel words struck to his heart, she would have left them unuttered.

She said she had made a mistake when he said, coldly—

"As you choose. I thought you with her story of distress, for I came to you with a tender heart, and I felt I had some claims on my cousin's generosity, when I was pleading the cause of an old and tried friend as Christine Verne. I see my error, and will not detain you longer."

He bowed, and was about to withdraw, but Hilda, with a mighty effort, curbed her rising anger, and, hastening after him, she laid one exquisite hand on his arm, and said, pleadingly, with lovely eyes misty with tears:

"You are angry with me, Geoffrey. What will become of me without your love and sympathy?"

Such a perfect picture as she made, with her blue velvet dress sweeping around her graceful form, and her beautiful face like a grateful child's, raised to his.

She knew her power, and was not surprised at the softened expression in his eyes, as he answered:

"I am more grieved than angry, Hilda. You loved Christine Verne once, and were unyielding in your efforts of friendship when she had but slight need of them. Now, when she is in poverty and disgrace, through no fault of her own, and you have it in your power to aid her, you refuse. Will you not give her this position of goodness to your little sisters, when you know how noble and worthy she is? Cousin Hilda, reconsider your decision, and for my sake, for your own sake, give her the aid one true woman has a right to expect from another."

His handsome face wore a look of earnest pleading, which Hilda would have found it hard to resist had her sympathy been asked for any other person than Christine Verne. But, as it was, a hard, determined look set over her face, obliterating all its lines of soft beauty as she listened to the thrill of tenderness in his voice.

She had humbled to him, and this was the result—to hear him plead, with all the eloquence he possessed, the cause of the woman she hated, the one rival she feared, and in whose downfall she triumphed.

"If you force the truth from me, Geoffrey, here it is. I believe Christine Verne is as vile as her miserable uncle, whose name is now the talk of the town. I would no more have her in my house than I would the veriest vagabond in the street. If her story so moves you with compassion, and her red lips moved in a sneering smile, why not go and offer her the consolation of your love and the shelter of your home? No doubt she would gladly accept both, as she has so long been trying her arts to win you!"

"May God forgive you, Hilda, your cruel, unjust words! Would that I were worthy of her love, or had a hope that she would listen to me! I would go to her this hour, and ask her to be my wife! Your heartless words against her have opened my eyes, and now I know she is the only woman I ever loved. Good-bye!"

And Hilda knew, as she heard him going down the steps, that her princely cousin was lost to her forever.

"But he shall never marry her! I will take care that she does not cross his path again!"

An hour later, when Christine Verne, in her humble abode, with her pure, proud face wearing a look of pitiful anguish, heard Hilda's soft, sympathetic voice breathing in her ear a plan of escape from her wretchedness and poverty, she said, with a glad ring in her sweet voice:

"How good you are, Hilda! How could I have ever doubted your love and sympathy? How did you manage to get this position for me, dear?"

And Hilda answered, with apparent hesitation, her soft cheek crimsoned with loyal indignation—

"After hearing your sad story, I first went to Cousin Geoffrey for counsel; for you know," with another, still lovelier, blush, "we are engaged, and I thought he could find some position for you without delay, he had so many influential friends; but, to you know, dear—I hate to tell you, it is so horrid—Geoffrey actually declared that he doubted your honesty!"

Poor Christine drooped her head with a gasp of pain.

"Yes; was it not dreadful? After that, of course, I would scorn his help, and so told him, on your behalf. But, fortunately, as I knew of this Mrs. Harcourt, who wants a governess at once to go abroad with her, I went to her again without delay, recommended you as you deserved, satisfied all her scruples, and you are to go to her this very evening, and the day after to-morrow you will sail for Italy."

The lovely, flower-like face drooped beneath her words as from a cruel blow, but, through her voice assumed a more tender tone as she continued:

"So you must cheer up, dear, and look life bravely in the face again. Once away from this horrid city, with its thousand cruel tongues, you will forget your trouble, and your youth and beauty, you will win the heart of some rich foreigner or other. Good-bye."

down the steps, that her princely cousin was lost to her forever.

"Thank you, Mr. Brandon! I have purposely kept my residence a mystery from one whose doubts of my integrity convinced me that he could have no possible interest in my welfare."

She turned away, but he caught her hand. "Christine, what does this mean? Do you know that I love you better than life? Did you not read the truth in the old, sweet time, when nothing but the fear of my unworthiness kept the avowal from my lips? Dearest, do not turn away! Mine, at least, has been the one loyal heart. Surely, such love as mine deserves a better response than scorn."

And in the space of the two curious children, and the stray visitors that flitted through the gallery, the truth came out at last, and Geoffrey learned the peridy of Hilda de Vere's heart, and Geoffrey Brandon blessed the mistake that gave him his bride at last.

Hilda never met her beautiful rival again for she married a rich old banker, and went to Bristol to live, before Christine crossed the Channel once more as the honored wife of the man they both loved.

Poor Christine drooped her head with a gasp of pain.

"Yes; was it not dreadful? After that, of course, I would scorn his help, and so told him, on your behalf. But, fortunately, as I knew of this Mrs. Harcourt, who wants a governess at once to go abroad with her, I went to her again without delay, recommended you as you deserved, satisfied all her scruples, and you are to go to her this very evening, and the day after to-morrow you will sail for Italy."

And the traitress stooped and kissed her. Christine took the situation offered her, and entered on her duties with an aching heart, at the very hour when Geoffrey, his breast burning with a tender love, was hastening towards her humble home, determined to put his fate to the test, and ask her to be his wife.

Urgent business had taken him from town immediately after his interview with Hilda, and she had time to mature her plan, and to see it accomplished before his return.

His surprise and chagrin may be imagined when he found her gone, and all his inquiries could elicit no information about her.

At last in despair he resorted to Hilda.

"Do you know what has become of Miss Verne?"

She arched her brow.

"How should I know, not having your interest in her welfare? Should I repeat what Rumor says, I should almost say you would slay me," and she shrugged her graceful shoulders provokingly.

"Tell me what you have heard," he said, sternly, with compressed lips.

"Only that she and Signor Rucini, her old music master, who was always such an ardent admirer of hers, in spite of pretty little Mistress Rucini and the three babies, disappeared from the city on the same day, and some gentleman, who is nameless, saw two persons bearing a striking resemblance to the runaways, walking arm in arm in a most confidential manner, in Brighton, yesterday."

"A foul, base slander! Who was the man who dared to say this thing? He shall retract his false words or die!"

Hilda laughed, maliciously.

"I said he was nameless. As I have told you all I know on the subject, suppose we select a more pleasant theme for conversation. Did you have a pleasant trip to Manchester?"

And all of Geoffrey's inquiries could elicit no further information on the subject. At last he fell into a settled gloom, and went abroad to seek relief in change and travel.

And Miss Verne, the governess, after the first strangeness of her position wore off, took up the burden of life again with a brave spirit. Her little charges soon learned to love her, and being a true woman, her heart went out to them in deep tenderness, and she daily thanked Hilda de Vere for her kindness in obtaining for her the position she occupied.

But there was one drop of wormwood which time seemed powerless to soften. That Geoffrey Brandon, the man to whom she had given her heart in those old days—whose look, tone and manner had so often told her she was beloved of him—should have turned against her in her sore distress and trouble, should even have doubted her honesty, was a hard blow to bear.

Doubtless, ere this, dear Hilda was his wife, and even the pain of his cruel treachery grew less sharp as the months rolled away in beautiful Italy, and she was permitted to bask in the glory of that wonderful land.

Until one day, in a picture gallery in Rome, she met him face to face.

She tried to escape him, but his eager gaze fastened upon her lovely features in a rare rapture of delighted surprise, and un mindful of the two children at her side, he caught her hands, and asked, in that thrilling tone she so well remembered—

"Miss Verne! Christine! How happy I am to find you! Where have you hidden yourself all these weary months?"

He would have drawn her arm through his, but she drew herself haughtily away, and answered, icily:

FIRE ALARM TELEGRAPH.—The question of putting in the fire alarm telegraph, which is to come before the voters of the town on Monday, is one that should claim their earnest attention. In a town of the size of this the necessity of having the best means of extinguishing fires is self-evident, and needs no argument to demonstrate it, and in nothing is the adage, "a stitch in time saves nine," found to be truer than as regards fire. A fire that a stream from a hydrant, if applied in the nick of time would extinguish with but a few dollars' loss, and a few moments' time, in five minutes dooms the building to destruction, and its owner, or the insurance companies, to great loss. Woburn is spread over so much territory, that it is impossible to get an alarm from many parts of the village to the nearest hose house in time for the firemen to save the endangered property. This subject should be carefully considered before town meeting. And it may be mentioned that a fire-alarm system can be put in operation to-day for less than one-third the cost reported by the committee who investigated the matter at the Town's instance some years ago.

ICE IN MAINE.—A gentleman who has just returned from Bangor reports great excitement there over the demand for ice, for which the price has risen as high as $2.70 a ton. Every available man and team is being pressed into service in the work of cutting and gathering the ice, and as the cost is only from 50 to 75 a ton, the profit is at once seen. All along the banks of the river ice is stored awaiting the first thaw, and the excitement has cast the lumber and mining fever into the shade. It is said that New York parties are free purchasers now at $2.70. The hardware dealers have been benefited by this in an extensive demand for ice hardware, and such has been the rush that all purchases have been forwarded by express. A year ago the price of ice was $1.10 a ton. Gangs are working day and night. It is thought that 1000 vessels will be required to move the crop, and freights from the Kennebec are now $1.75.

TOWN MEETING.—It is not because we suspect that any one will forget the fact that town meeting occurs on Monday that we again refer to it, but to urge upon every voter to thoroughly acquaint himself with all the probable action of that meeting. Look the warrant carefully through, and make up your mind what ought to be the action on each article. Study the nominations for town officers presented by all parties, and make up your ticket from your own judgment and knowledge rather than accept the dictum of some ballot-peddler. In short, go to town meeting prepared to exercise your right of franchise intelligently.

BIENNIAL ELECTIONS.—The House of Representatives passed the resolve which provides for biennial elections of State officers and members of the Legislature, on Tuesday, by a vote of 114 to 33, which is more than the required two-thirds of the average attendance. This action of the House will have to be ratified by the Senate, the Legislature of 1881, and afterward by the people of the State before it will become incorporated in the constitution, and a working law.

Rev. Dr. Fay, of Bangor, Maine, preached for the third time at the First Church, last Sunday. His sermons have been strong and direct, and have given universal satisfaction.

This is the time of year when the young bachelors pick their way along a corridor piled with furniture and bedding, to his room, and thanks fortune he is not a benedict.

OMNIBUS TO CUMMINGSVILLE.—On and after Monday next, an omnibus will make trips between Woburn and Cummingsville, as per time table published in another column.

The dates for college base-ball games in 1880 have already been decided upon. The interest in the education of our youth is not abating.—Boston Post.

TRINITY CHURCH.—The services were appropriate to Easter Sunday. Sermons were about the glory of the resurrected life and heaven, as contrasted with the experiences of this world. The following is a digest of the Rev. Mr. Winckley's remarks before the morning sermon:—To-day is the ninth anniversary of the consecration of this church, and we may well pause and review the past. We go back to 1871 to find an Episcopal clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Blackstone, the sole proprietor of what is now Boston. Nineteen years after that, Caleb Simonds came with his wife, and began to build a home at Dry Brook, Cummingsville, in Jan., 1843, the old house is now standing. This is the first settlement of an Episcopal family in Woburn, and I do not doubt that the prayer book services commenced on that spot 237 years ago. Public worship began there as early as 1751. An attempt was made to establish a mission here in 1844. Efforts were again made in 1865 which resulted in the organization of 1866, when services were maintained for several months in the Town Hall. The Bible and prayer-book now in use here commemorate that movement. Trinity church organized under the statutes, April 22, 1867. The foundation of the building was begun Sept. 25, the corner stone laid Oct. 29, and the edifice opened for public worship the following year, Wednesday, March 11, 1868. On Tuesday, the 30th in Lent, the church was consecrated, March 28, 1871. The first Easter ever celebrated was, I believe, March 28. That good old man, the first rector of Trinity, Rev. E. N. Downing, was here 7 months. Rev. R. A. Nicholson, 9 months. Rev. J. W. Porter, D. D., 2 years, 4 months, and 10 days. Rev. G. A. Rand, 1 year, 8 months, 17 days. Rev. G. P. Allen, 1 year. Rev. S. U. Shearn, 2 years, 2 months, 4 days. Rev. Geo. Denham took charge Sept. 8, 1877. There had been 58 families of 128 souls, of whom 38 families of 83 remained; of a total 77 communicants, 32 remained, Sept. 8, 1877. Of 112 families connected with the parish since, embracing 415 souls, 64 families of 226 remain, and of 127 communicants, 83 remain. The net gain is 26 families of 143 souls, and in communicants, 51. Of such this pass as Episcopal, there are some who rarely worship in church; 76 are under 10 years of age; 82 live over 1 mile distant; 67 over 2 miles, and others at greater distance. The present rector has baptized 73, presented 45 for confirmation, delivered 6 courses of lectures, travelled and labored with village services and Bible classes, &c., and he is but one of nine ministers of God, who have done what they could as shepherds here. In addition to all which, 4 bishops of the church, some 50 clergymen have preached and taught and prayed at this desk. No wonder the Churchman said,—"Trinity Church appears to be prospering, for the inference is that work must tell. Let us pray and hope and trust, for all real spiritual success is of Him who saith,—'according to your faith, be it unto you.'"

A WOBURN LITERATURE.—We have received a copy of the Kearsarge Sentinel, published at Wilmet, N. H., and of which Mr. Herbert B. Dow is assistant editor. Mr. Dow is the son of James N. Dow, Esq., secretary of the Woburn Savings bank, a graduate of our High School and of Harvard college. He is also principal of an institution of learning, called a "School of Practice," which, in addition to the ordinary English branches, teaches book-keeping, banking and telegraphy, and the languages.

REMOVAL.—The Woburn Five Cent Savings Bank have removed to their new quarters, the old Library rooms, No. 180 Main St. The rooms have been fitted up very neatly and will be a great improvement over the former location. The trustees hold their first quarterly meeting in the new rooms this (Friday) evening, and the bank will open for business Saturday.

WOMEN VOTERS.—Twenty-five women have been registered as voters. Eleven more have been assessed, and can register to-night or tomorrow night, April 2d and 3d. Having been assessed, they will have to pay their tax, whether they register or not, and there remain but two evenings in which they can perfect their right to vote on Monday.

SELECTMEN.—Regular meeting, Thursday evening. All present but Cummings. Recommended Lee Hammond to County Commissioners for an innholder's license. Henry Coady recommended for peddler's license. Voted to hold final meeting of the Board, on Monday, at 8 1/2 A. M. Bills for March approved.

J. P. Bartheux, druggist, was before Trial-Judge Converse, Tuesday, charged with selling liquor without a license; but as the evidence offered by the prosecution was all to the effect that no liquor was sold in Bartheux's store the case was dismissed.

CONCERT.—The choir of the St. Charles church gave a concert and entertainment at St. John's Institute, Monday evening. There was a good audience, and the efforts of the choir were well appreciated.

SURPRISE.—The members of the Hook & Ladder company paid a surprise visit to their clerk, Mr. Geo. W. Nichols, Tuesday evening, and presented him with an easy chair.

The honorary members of the Hook & Ladder Company and ladies, indulged themselves with a social dance, Wednesday evening.

CUMMINGSVILLE.—The new post office at Cummingsville has finally been established, and Mr. E. F. Cutter commissioned as postmaster.

On Wednesday, two hundred hogs were shipped from Hon. John Cummings's farm, destined for the English market.

G. A. B.—Department Commander Hawes has signified his intention to be present at the camp-fire of Post 35, April 21.

Remember Pinafore to-night by the Reeves Opera Co. You will be sorry if you don't go.

COMIC OPERA.—The presentation of the comic opera of "Penelope" at Lyceum Hall, Wednesday evening, by local talent, was entirely satisfactory to the large audience assembled. The singing was all good, and the acting excellent. The plot being slight, the interest in the programme rested in the singing and acting, and it is not too much to say that should this company give the piece more study and thorough practice, it might be made a success similar to "Pinafore," and similar musical burlesques, that are so occupying the pleasure-seeking public just now. Mrs. Clough-Phinney won the applause of the audience in her first song, and sustained her role throughout the piece with credit to her musical and dramatic talents, and received hearty applause for her singing. Mrs. Trull was a charming Mrs. Croaker, and Messrs. Trull and Allen, as policeman and grenadier, elicited rounds of applause and shouts of laughter. The characters all seemed thoroughly to have seized upon the spirit of fun pervading the piece, and were successful in imparting it to the audience. The after-piece, "Bombastes Furioso," was also well acted, though not as enjoyable as "Penelope." The parts of the king by Mr. Aldrich, prime minister by Mr. Parker, Bombastes, by Mr. Ellis, and Distaffina, by Mrs. Clough-Phinney, were well sustained.

MORE NOMINATIONS.—The Greenback-Labor Club had a caucus Tuesday evening, and nominated the following gentlemen for town officers:—For Selectmen, John L. Munroe, Gilman F. Jones, John O. Ray, Thomas H. Hill, Alpha E. Thompson, Charles Breslin, Jr., Charles Porter, Patrick Calnan, Sr., James McCreedy; Town Clerk, M. S. Seeley; Treasurer, Leonard Thompson, Jr.; School Committee, Rev. M. D. Murphy, Jr., F. Trull, J. G. Maguire; Collector, Edward Simonds; Water Commissioner, Albert A. Ferrin; Library Committee, A. G. Carter; Auditors, J. C. Meahan, T. D. Hevey, Marcus Littlefield; Sexton, Lawrence Reade; Cemetery Committee, Horace Conn; Constables, C. K. Conn, J. E. Stewart, James McKittrick, James K. Doherty, Edward Simonds.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.—The Democratic caucus to consider matters relative to the approaching town election was held in Kelley's block, Thursday evening. Dr. G. P. Bartlett presided and Mr. A. G. Han was secretary. A committee consisting of the following named gentlemen was appointed to prepare a ticket for town officers and report at the polls on Monday: Dr. C. T. Lang, Thomas Moore, Charles Breslin, Jr., S. F. Trull, Dr. G. P. Bartlett, Samuel Skelton, J. A. Ham, J. G. Maguire, Cyrus Monroe, J. J. Powers, Walter Wyman, James Maguire, Barney McHugh, H. F. Smith, Owen Kerrigan. A rallying committee of forty-one was appointed, who were also empowered to distribute votes at town meeting.

TOWN ELECTION.—The meeting at Grand Army Hall last Saturday evening was presided over by E. W. Gray, Esq., and Wm. F. Davis was secretary. A committee of five—E. F. Wver, E. A. Pierce, H. Collamore, J. W. Ellard, and W. R. Patnam—was chosen to retire and nominate a committee of twelve, to whom the subject of nominations for town officers should be referred with full powers. The committee was chosen as follows:—J. G. Pollard, D. Macfarlane, E. N. Blake, J. W. Johnson, N. J. Simonds, A. Buckman, G. W. Pollock, F. S. Burgess, E. A. Pierce, Wm. Ellard, T. Marvin Parker, J. Addison Thompson.

REMEMBERED.—Walter H. Thayer, collector at the branch office of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., of this city, being about to dissolve his connection here to take charge of an office in Woburn for the same company, was surprised on Tuesday evening by being made the recipient of an elegant picture and easel, from the employees of the office and other friends. His numerous friends in Lynn will "miss his smiling countenance," but wish him success in his new enterprise.—Lynn City Item.

EASTER SUNDAY.—The weather of Easter Sunday was wretched, and no doubt caused very many to stay at home who would much rather have missed attending church any of the other fifty-one Sabbaths in the year. A wet, heavy snow commenced falling Saturday evening, and continued nearly through Sunday. The snow melted nearly as fast as it fell, but gained sufficient to tempt a number of sleighs from their retirement.

TRINITY PARISH MEETING.—At a regular meeting of the Trinity Church, Monday evening, a question as regards the eligibility to vote of some who were in attendance arose, and James Folsom, C. W. Davis, James Graham, C. W. Sweetser, and S. F. Trull were appointed a committee to investigate and report as to the rights of the case.

FORESTRY.—The meeting, last week Friday evening, to consider the advisability of forming a court of the order of Foresters, resulted in the organization of a preliminary club with these officers: President, T. H. Hill; Vice President, W. C. C. Colegate; Recording Secretary, W. H. Mathews; Treasurer, F. D. Morrill.

ELECTION.—The T. A. society of Montvale, at its meeting last Sunday, elected these officers:—President, William McDonough; Secretary, Jere McCarthy; Treasurer, Jere Covey. The society has been organized since October, 1877, and is doing excellent work.

A court in Richmond, Va., has conferred a colored society known as "The Sons and Daughters, Brothers and Sisters, Cousins and Ancest of Moses."

LETTER FROM REV. DR. MARCH.

The following letter has been received from Rev. Dr. March, and was read to the First Church on Wednesday evening. It was written on board the steamer Labrador, off the English Coast, and mailed at Paris.

In this first letter home, I feel like going back to Apostolic times and saying to all saints in the church, and to all souls in Woburn, grace, mercy, and peace be unto you, from God the Father, and from his son Jesus Christ. By the will of God I have had thus far a prosperous journey. The most dreaded part, the first passage of the ocean, is safely accomplished, and I thank God and take courage for all that remains.

On the day of starting, the wind blew sharp from shore off Sandy Hook, and the sun shone with dazzling brightness on the sea. The deck of our ship took even and steady as the house floor beneath our feet, and all looked fair for a pleasant passage to the end of our course. A little way out at sea there came on a thin white mist shutting out the last view of shore. The Canard steamer Gallia, that started at the same time with us, turned off to the north of our course and in the distance it looked like a spectre ship hanging between sea and sky. The wind grew stronger and stronger from the west. Soon we had square sails set on our masts, and the ship began to move. The steamers swept on at high speed, plunging the plain of the deep with its double shroud of iron, four hundred and thirty feet long, forty feet deep and as many wide, throwing white furrows, which as it went, went, leaving no trace of its track behind. And now the ship began to roll, the walkers on deck reeled like drunken men, and the tall masts surged to and fro like the topmost branches of the forest in a winter storm. And so the first night of our voyage came on in grand style to try the sea-going capacities of all on board.

In the gray light of the next morning the ship still rocked to and fro, and I rushed on its way with frantic speed, like some wild prairie horse that had been caught and bound for awhile, and then had broken loose from captivity, and was again rejoicing in the freedom of the boundless plains which had been his native home. The best of the sea-going passengers showed signs of weariness from the night's tossing, but all were glad that the strong wind had come to the help of steam in bearing us more swiftly on our way.

The seven o'clock watch was served to me in bed that night, and the empty chairs at the nine o'clock breakfast were more than filled. The servants answered every call with French politeness and with cheerfulness, as if service were a delight rather than a duty. When the five o'clock dinner bell rung, most of the passengers came to the table with the light-hearted looks of men who had cast the cares of their minds and the contents of their stomachs into the deep. An hour and a half at the table was more than some could enjoy without retreating to give more full expression to their feelings in private.

And so our voyage went on with continual change, till now at last our days and nights of discontent are made glorious summer by this warm sunlight on the smooth surface of the sea. The winds that pursued and lashed us, and the waves that tossed and heaved, and the wearied of the chase, and have perched like exhausted eagles upon some high shore in the fields of air, till some other ship shall cross their track and break their slumber.

With renewed greeting to all Woburn friends, and with cheerful and warm prayers that the same blessing of our common Father may abide in your homes and go with me on my journey.

I am most truly and affectionately yours,
DANIEL MARCH.

LOCAL CAUCUS.—On Wednesday evening a citizens' caucus was held in Engine Hall, East Woburn, to express the preferences of the village for town officers. Wm. H. Lounsbury presided, and A. L. Richardson was secretary. William Johnson, A. L. Richardson, and W. H. Lounsbury were candidates for choice for Selectmen which finally fell on Mr. Johnson. Wm. H. McDonough was named for Constable. A committee of three, Owen Kerrigan, Michael Golden, and Jere McCarthy was appointed to present the case of East Woburn at the general caucuses. A rallying committee of seven was also appointed. There were 104 voters present.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.—At the meeting of the School Committee, Tuesday evening, it was voted to establish a new primary school in the Highland school-house to accommodate the overflow of the Lawrence and Highland primaries. Miss Jessie A. Day was elected to teach the new school, Miss Alice S. Hartshorn was transferred to Miss Day's school, and Miss Marietta H. Bowers to the new school, Miss Hosmer takes her Grammar class to the Central schoolhouse, where a room has been fitted up for her use.

Some extensive improvements are likely to be made by our manufacturers this Spring, among which are already mentioned an enlargement of P. W. Kinney's leather manufactory, to about twice its present size, and a new shop to be built by L. B. Russell.

G. A. R. CAMP.—The Grand Army posts of Middlesex county will camp at Tyng's Island, in the Merrimack River, April 19, 20 and 21.

POLICE COURT.—Joseph P. Bartheux, illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, discharged.

Some thirteen Woburn people left town on Tuesday for new homes in Michigan.

TOWNS REPORTS.—The annual reports of the various boards of town officers have been received and distributed. They make a book of two hundred pages, printed by the Boston Stereotype Foundry. The Town Clerk's report coming first in order, shows the vital statistics to be 274 births registered in town during 1879, 10 of which occurred elsewhere and two had been omitted from previous reports, leaving the number born in Woburn during the year, 262. 148 were males and 126 females. There were 85 marriages, 106 of the contracting parties being natives of the United States and 64 of foreign birth. 170 deaths were recorded, 100 males and 70 females. Of this number 68 were under 10 years of age, and 8 between 80 and 90. The Selectmen ask for appropriations for the maintenance of the several departments to the amount of $120,760.03, and the unexpended balances now on hand, not including $8,500 asked for by the Water Commissioners for water works construction and expense. The gross indebtedness of the town inclusive of water loan is $506,657.90. The Water Commissioners report shows that at the end of the fiscal year there were 2496 takers, an increase of 187, and the average daily consumption during the year was 733,546 gallons, an increase over last year of 82,512 gallons. The Commissioners ask for appropriations to enable them to make much needed repairs. The report of the Library Committee shows that 50,548 books have been lent from the library since the new building was opened, 935 volumes have been added, making the total number of books now on the shelves 17,703. The Chief of Police reports 282 arrests, 25 of whom were females, a decrease of 36 from last year; and 826 tramps lodged and fed, 256 less than last year. The causes of arrest were 158 for drunkenness, 55 for assault, 7 for keeping and selling liquor, 14 for disturbing the peace, 7 for larceny, and the remainder distributed among petty offences. Chief Engineer Ferrin reports 39 fires and alarms, with a damage to property of $69,465. He urges the adoption of a fire alarm telegraph. The School Committee and Superintendent Davis present very interesting reports. There are 2424 scholars between the ages of 5 and 15, an increase of 157. The Superintendent gives an interesting account of the modus operandi and results of the "new method" of education, and a table of the names and length of service of the teachers employed.

SAD DEATH.—The news of the death of Miss Josephine A. Kendall, which occurred at Naples, early in March, will be read with deep sorrow by her Woburn friends and acquaintances. Without adulation it may be said that no woman ever gave promise of a more brilliant career. After graduation from our Woburn High School, in 1870, she taught school for a year in the West, and then entered the Female Medical College of New York. She finished the three years' course there in 1874, and in May of the same year, sailed for Europe, there to complete her studies. She subsequently entered the medical department of the Hochschule, or University of Zurich, from which she graduated somewhat less than a year ago, with the highest honors ever awarded a foreign student. In addition to her work at the University, she had spent her vacations in travel and in the study of foreign languages, and had already published a medical work in German. At the time of her death, a professorship was awaiting her in the Female Medical College, of New York. With a fine intellect, an excellent physique, and a character and disposition such as to gain the highest respect and love of all her sudden death from the fatal Italian malaria, after so many years of hard study and faithful preparation for her life work, seems doubly sad. The remains are to be embalmed, and will probably be brought to Woburn for burial.

W. H. S. G. A.—The last of the series of literary entertainments that has been given by the High School Graduates Association, occurred at High School Hall, on Monday evening. The room was filled to overflowing, and extra seats had to be brought in. The exercises consisted of a review of one hundred years of American literature, and were under the charge of B. E. Bond, Esq., who read an essay. The essay was interspersed and illustrated with readings and songs from the works of the authors under consideration. The programme was somewhat long, but interesting and instructive in the main.

A NICE A-RANGE-MENT.—The members of Highland Hose Co., No. 5, presented their comrade, Pipeman John Devlin, with a "Welcome" cooking range and a full set of stove furniture. The recipient of this useful gift has been an efficient member of the fire department for about six years, and is reckoned by Chief Ferrin one of the very best pipemen in the service. It is hinted that Mr. Devlin is preparing to take unto himself a wife, hence the nature of the gift.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT.—The Unitarian Sunday School gave a concert in the Church, Sunday evening. The platform was beautifully decorated with flowers. The exercises consisted of recitations and dialogues by the little ones, and singing by a choir of young ladies, with a few remarks from the pastor.

TAKE NOTICE.—A liberal price will be paid for either a complete volume of Vol. XX of the Journal, or Nos. 4, 7, 17, 21, 31, 33, 34, 38, and 51. Any persons having any or all of the above, can get a good price for them at this office.

FAIR.—The St. Charles Catholic Church is arranging to hold a fair, to commence April 19, and continue three or four weeks, as shall be determined in the future. It is not yet decided whether to hold the fair at St. John Institute or at Lyceum Hall.

The superintendents and teachers of the First Church met for a social talk during their work, last week Friday evening.

Telegraphic weather reports are to be received at the depot daily, and bulletined there.

The next quarterly convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations, of the State, is to be held in Woburn, in June.

North Woburn.
PARISH MEETING.—The annual parish meeting of the North Congregational Society was held Thursday evening of last week. Chas. W. Dearborn was chosen moderator. The Treasurer's report was read and accepted. Chose John R. Carter, Choseman Wright, Geo. O. Bell, Chas. T. Dearborn, and R. P. Kimball for Board of Assessors and Parish Committee. For Treasurer and Collector, W. S. Danforth; Assistant Collectors, Geo. O. Bell, B. F. Kimball; Auditor, S. A. Thompson.

RUMFORD HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION.—The Rumford Historical Association held its annual meeting for the choice of officers and the transaction of other business at the Rumford House, North Woburn, Friday evening, March 28th,—the 127th birthday of the Count Rumford. In the absence of Hon. Charles Choate, the President, Mr. Leonard Thompson, Jr., one of the trustees, was called to the chair. After the presentation and acceptance of the usual reports, the old board of officers were re-elected to serve for the present year. In connection with the report of the secretary, he gave the gratifying information that since the Rumford Library was made free, and other changes were in consequence made in its management, its usefulness has been very greatly increased. Books have been regularly taken by 116 persons. Besides this, fifty persons have taken books from the town library through the Rumford library by means of an arrangement made in November last with the librarian of the former, where "a box of books, securely fastened, is sent weekly for exchange" to the North Village. The good influence of the library has thus been specially apparent in the growing and widening interest of the Rumford school in taking out and reading works having an important bearing upon their various studies. Col. Leonard Thompson, of Woburn, and Rev. Charles W. Thompson, of Danville, Vt., were proposed and unanimously elected as members of the Association. Mr. Alfred G. Carter offered to the Association a framed receipt given by his ancestor, the Rev. Thomas Carter, who became in 1642, the first minister of Woburn. This was accepted by a unanimous vote of thanks, as a relic of great interest and worthy of careful preservation. Mr. George M. Champney addressed the meeting in regard to the desirableness of so enlarging the sphere of the Association as to embrace notices and records of the important incidents of the Woburn of to-day, as well as investigations of the numerous unsettled questions touching the history of the Woburn of the past. After remarks from various gentlemen in approval, so far as may be consistent with the constitution and by-laws, of Mr. Champney's suggestions, it was voted that a future meeting, at the call of the secretary, be held at Woburn Center for the special purpose of further consideration of this subject. It is a matter for renewed congratulation that the Association is not in debt. For the old Rumford House, on which there was for some time a heavy mortgage, it does not now owe a dollar. It has also made some repairs, and has some furniture, portraits, etc., for which not a cent remains unpaid. But the great work of general and thorough repair and fitting up still remains to be done. It is not proposed nor desired to change the antique style and appearance of the house, nor indeed to do anything except what is found to be really necessary to the proper preservation, decency and safety of the building,—such as the substitution of new for decayed sills shingling a part of the roof, painting, etc. To do all that is needed will cost, in the estimation of the trustees, not less than $300. The work of raising this amount has been favorably begun among those who had already contributed liberally for the purchase of the place, and it is strongly desired that it may be vigorously prosecuted to a completely successful and speedy attainment of the object in view. This is the more desirable from the fact that a large collection of relics in the shape of furniture, pictures, papers, pamphlets and other objects of antiquarian value have been offered or promised to the Association when there shall be provided a suitable place in which to keep and preserve them for future exhibition. In view of the present and still more, the prospective usefulness of the Association in awakening and keeping alive an interest in matters intimately connected with the history and educational prosperity of Woburn, and in view of the fact that the money already raised (between $2,000 and $3,000), has been given by a comparatively small number of persons in Woburn and elsewhere, the Association feel justified in commending the object to that wider circle of friends who, though they have not contributed anything as yet, may be fairly presumed to be interested in every enterprise that gives promise of gathering up and preserving the important items of historic value touching the past, present and future of Woburn; especially as illustrated by her most distinguished sons and citizens. Meanwhile, the confident expectation is authorized that they who, in appreciation of the objects of the Association, have contributed and worked for its success heretofore will still contribute and work for it hereafter.

REV. MR. TOWNLEY.—The Gouverneur, N. Y., Times of March 23, contains the following in regard to H. C. Townley, formerly of Woburn:—

Last Sunday, Rev. H. C. Townley, of the Baptist church, Gouverneur, tendered his resignation as pastor of that society. With much reluctance the resignation was accepted. Our citizens generally join with the church in regrets at the departure of this talented clergyman from amongst us. He goes to Watertown, where the Baptist society is to be congratulated upon their choice of a pastor whose ministrations and association will be a general benefit and permanent blessing. Gouverneur people, without respect to creed or denomination, will bid him good-bye with sincere sadness and genuine regret.

ALL FOOL'S DAY.—April 1st has from time immemorial been the day when small boys and the sportively inclined elders have been in the habit of playing practical jokes. Various amusing jokes were played upon Woburn people, one West-side man being reported as taking quite an extended journey on the strength of a fictitious telegram purporting to have come from his wife.

Winchester.

Business is reported to be very good by the merchants of the village.

ACCIDENT.—The little daughter of Dr. J. S. Flagg fell and broke her arm on Monday.

The mud is rapidly drying up, and people begin to be seen out for a pleasure drive.

A meeting to organize a division of the American Legion of Honor is to be held this (Friday) evening.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT.—The Unitarian Sunday School is to give a concert tomorrow (Sunday) evening, at half past six o'clock,—the same that was postponed a week ago.

UNCLE SOLOMON.—The many friends of the late Mr. Solomon Fletcher, will find a very good photograph of him on sale at Dr. Brown's drug store, made by H. E. Strout, of Woburn.

ANNIVERSARY.—The Knights of Honor celebrated their third anniversary at Oma Hall, Wednesday evening. The exercises included a song by Mrs. Bailey and reading by Miss Minnie Herron, a recent graduate of the High school. There was also a collation and dancing.

PETITION TO MOVE THE LIBRARY.—A petition is being circulated asking that the library be removed from its present rooms to the hall in the Brown-Stanton block. It is claimed that the room it is now in is too small, and that if it is removed to the new block a reading room will be opened in connection with it.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday, as Mr. John McManis was oiling the machinery at Mosely's tannery, standing on a belt to reach a pulley overhead, the engine was started, and he was thrown violently down, breaking his right thigh. He was brought to Woburn, and subsequently sent to the Mass. General Hospital.

MASSONIC SOCIAL.—The social, supper and ball given last week Friday evening, at Lyceum Hall, was a grand success. There were about one hundred couples present, including Gen. Banks and prominent persons from Boston, and the net receipts were $140. This money is to be applied toward furnishing the new Masonic hall.

ORGAN CONCERT.—Mr. Charles L. Harrington, assisted by Mrs. Bailey, Miss Hamlin, Messrs. Daniels, Pond and Lamson, is to give an organ concert at the Congregational church, Friday evening, April 9th. These names are a sufficient guarantee of the excellence of the concert. The proceeds are to go for the benefit of the musical fund of the church.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The National Citizen Soldier, published at Washington, D. C., is an ably edited monthly, devoted to the interest of the soldier, and every soldier in the country should have the reading of it. It defends the men who shouldered their guns in time of danger; it keeps them posted on all matters pertaining to pensions, back pay, land warrants, &c. It also pleads for them with the people, and does not forget to call the attention of Congress to their claims. It boldly advocates every measure whereby the soldier will be benefited, and denounces every action that is detrimental to their interest. Twenty-five cents pays a year's subscription. Sample copies can be had by addressing the Citizen-Soldier Publishing Co., Box 588, Washington, D. C.

An admirable specimen of good fortune in contributors and good sense in editing, is Lippincott's Magazine for April. It is entertaining, educational, fresh and bright throughout. The short stories, three in number, are capital. The Summer Land Sketch describes the ruins of Uxmal, that mysterious buried city of the New World, which attests the existence, at some former period, of a race of builders on this continent rivaling those of Nineveh in the grandeur of their designs, in mechanical skill, and in amplitude of means. The other papers are all readable.

The April number of "The Popular Science Monthly," in the variety, readability, and substantial elegance of its articles, well sustains its reputation. Its first paper, by C. M. Lungen, on "Progress and Poverty," is an elaborate discussion of the views of Mr. George, presented in his recent work under that title. The paper treats of certain important and fundamental problems of economical science, with great clearness of conception and perspicuity of statement. There has recently been a curious and extraordinary outbreak on the planet Jupiter, which Mr. Henry J. Slack describes and discusses in an illustrated article under the title of "What is Jupiter doing?" Dr. Albert J. Leffingwell contributes a brilliant and powerful paper on "The Scientific Aspects of Free-Will." Prof. Jevons treats of "Experimental Legislation" in a most instructive chapter on the science of law-making. Prof. H. L. Fairchild contributes a very entertaining illustrated paper in the department of natural history on "Curious Ways of getting Food." Those who are interested in the bearings of scientific analysis on artistic questions will be pleased with the subtle and lucid discussion of "The Pleasure of Visual Form," by James Sully, now a leading writer on aesthetic science. An illustrated article by Prof. E. Ray Lankester, "The Crayfish," treats of that instructive creature, now suddenly become so celebrated through Prof. Huxley's last work. Teachers and parents will be interested in the article on "Learning to Write." "A Consideration of Suicide," by J. H. Hopkins, handles a very difficult problem with great ingenuity and force. Much interesting information is given in the contribution by Ellen Prescott, on "Vegetable Phosphorescence." W. J. McGee devotes an elaborate paper to Croall's "Climate and Time." "A Living Hymn," "Size of Brain and Size of Body," and "The Textile Plants of the World," are fresh and instructive articles; and the full biographical "Sketch of Dr. Charles F. Chandler," which is accompanied by an admirable portrait, will be read with pleasure by everybody. The editor deals with "Inter-oceanic Canal Question" in an independent and decisive way which will just now command attention. The literary department, "Miscellany," and "Notes," are as usual copious and attractive.

Scrivener for April closes the XIXth volume of this magazine, which will be ten years old in November. The current number contains a large variety, notwithstanding the space given to the serials. Mr. Roe's "Success with small fruits," comes to an end. Mr. Cable's "Grandchildren" contains the story of Bras-Coupe, of which the reader has had previous. Mr. Schuyler's "Peter the Great," proceeds to a third installment, with accounts of the pacification of the Strits after the Riot, and the joint coronation of Peter and Ivan as Tsars; the third of the four parts of "Louisiana" shows an admirable phase of Mrs. Burnett's genius. Single papers of popular interest are not wanting in this number. "The growth of Wood-cut Printing," by Mr. Theodore L. DeVine, the printer of Scrivener deals with early methods on the hand-press, and is followed by a second paper on the modern methods by machines, the superiority of which it is the object of the papers to demonstrate. "The Orchestra of To-day," by Mr. Sidney Lanier, is likewise expository. "Eighty Miles in Indiana Caverns," is an account by Mr. H. C. Hovey, of explorations in Sibert's and Wyndot Caves, the latter being the largest cavern but one in the world. "Rocky Mountain Mules," by Mr. Ernest Ingersoll, is an illustrated paper of fun and adventure. An interesting anecdotal biography of Jules Michelet, the historian, is contributed by Mr. J. D. Osborne. A short story by Mrs. Julia Schayer, is entitled "A Summer's Diversion." The poetry of the number includes a narrative poem, "Fra Luigi's Marriage," by "H. H.," "The Torpedo," by Charles de Kay, and poems by Dora Reed Goodale and Violet Hunt, the latter being an English girl of seventeen, who is thought by famous English poets to have very decided poetic genius. The departments, though not quite so full as usual, have a number of features. In addition to Doctor Holland's "Lay Sermon for Easter," there is an offer by the conductors of Scrivener, of prizes for the best wood-engraving to be made by a pupil during 1880, the judges to be Mr. Timothy Cole, the engraver, Mr. De Vinne, and Mr. Drake, the art-editor of the magazine.

The following anecdote is told by an American preacher:—He was praying and in his prayer he said: "I pray that the power of Satan may be curtailed." Just then an old darkey in the congregation cried out:—"Yes, amen! Bless me! Cut him tail smack smooth off!"

A little girl went into a drug store the other day, and said to the proprietor in a half whisper, "If a little girl hasn't got no money how much chewing gum do you give for nothing?"

FLOUR! FLOUR!

BOSTON BRANCH GROCERY

LONGFELLOW'S HAXALL.

DIRECTIONS.—Given by the Manufacturer of this celebrated Flour, that the best results may be obtained.
Mix the Flour to a soft dough and knead it well, on account of its very great and peculiar strength, and it will make the most beautiful white and moist Light Bread or Biscuit.
In no case mix a stiff dough, for the great strength of the Flour will not admit of it, like weak Flour. This Flour is made from the choicest of wheat grown in the United States, and is manufactured with great care and skill, with the most approved system and machinery.
Having sold Hundreds of Barrels of this CELEBRATED FLOUR, we recommend with confidence as the BEST FLOUR in the Market.

Goods which have ever met with such public favor as the productions of CURTIS DAVIS & CO., must of necessity possess some superior or peculiar merit in washing quality, to have attained that universal popularity, and secured such an extensive demand wherever known. This alone would seem to indicate that consumers recognize that superiority and excellence in Soap, that their aim has been not only to produce the best, but to never suffer competition of fluctuation in cost of material to affect their competition—but always keep their Soap of every original standard of quality, and fix prices according to their actual value.

HORSE REMEDIES.

Save money and pain, and give your horse a cure because he is out of condition. If he has a spavin, curb, or other ailment, use the BALSAM RED ROOT.

For the cure of Bone Spavins, Ringbones, Whites or Side Bones. If he has a sore throat or glands, bathe and bandage with PAULOWNIA LINIMENT.

Prepared expressly for the cure of Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Colic, Coughs, Constipation, Bites and Worms. It is equally good for horses, Cattle, and, if given to Cows previous to Calving, will improve their condition, and cause them to do well.

Read the following testimonials:
WAKEFIELD, Nov. 28, 1879.
To those who may have horses afflicted with spavins, I would recommend them to use the BALSAM RED ROOT, as I tried it on my horse, which at the time was so lame as to be of no use whatever, and it worked to a cure. Believe it to be the best thing for the purpose ever offered to the public.
J. M. CATE.

The following from Professor Atwood:
BOSTON, Dec. 26, 1879.
I am pleased to recommend the use of the BALSAM RED ROOT, for I believe it was the means of saving the life of my horse which was badly affected with malignant sore throat.

ALMOST TIME.
Almost time for the pretty white daisies
Out of their sleep to awaken at last,
And over the meadows, with grasses and clover,
To bud and blossom and grow so fast;
Almost time for the buttercups yellow,
The ferns and the flowers, the roses and all,
To awaken from slumber, and merrily hasten
To gladden our hearts at the spring's first call.
Almost time for the skies to grow bluer,
And breezes to soften, and days to grow long;
For eyes to grow brighter, and hearts to grow
gladder,
And earth to rejoice in her jubilant song.
Almost time for the sweetest of seasons;
Nearer it comes, with each new-born day,
And soon the smile of the beautiful spring-time
Winter's cold shadows will chase away.

Selected Story.JENNIE'S SUBTERFUGE.

"Tell me who is here this summer?"
Fred Dayton lighted a fresh cigar.
His companion replied:
"My wife has a pretty cousin with her this year. An heiress, too, Fred."
"What's the figure?"
"Fifty thousand, from a grandfather, in her own right, and probably as much more when her bachelor uncle leaves this world."
"Is there any chance?"
"She is fancy free as yet, I believe, but,
after all, you have no occasion to look out for an heiress with your fortune."
"Bless your innocence, Tom! I could easily dispose of fifty thousand more, if it only bought finery for the future Mrs. Dayton."

Leaving from an upper window, but concealed by a thick running vine, a lady caught the words of the conversation.
"Upon my word," she soliloquized. "I am really much obliged to you, Tom! So my friend will try to win my money, will he? The impudent puppy! I'll make him pay for this, or my name is not Jennie Willett."

There was a spice of coquetry in the heart of the pretty heiress, and she grimly resolved that if the suitor for her money had a heart, she would add to the sting of her refusal of his offer, by wounding that organ, if possible.

So, when Mr. Fred Dayton was presented by pretty Mrs. Hogan to her cousin, he found himself greeted with a graceful cordiality that was flattering as well as delicious.

It was on the programme for the pleasures of that sunny June day, that a party was to wander in a shady woods for half a mile, to seek a spot famous for wild strawberries, and there to enjoy a picnic lunchcon.

So, as the walkers marshalled for their procession, it fell out that Miss Jennie Willett found by her side Mr. Fred Dayton.

He was in the net Miss Jennie was spreading for him before the strawberry field was reached.

And the lady?
Commencing her flirtation with her heart full of pique and a desire for revenge, she would not admit to herself what had made her morning so pleasant.

She told herself that it was mere gratification that her plans were working so nicely, and the prospect was now fair for her to make Mr. Dayton smart for his insolence.

Yet—and she stifled a sigh at the thought —it was a pity this delightful deference, this effort to please, was all assumed to gain her money.

She recalled words that proved her new suitor to be no mere puppy, but a man who had read much and thought deeply.

The summer days passed swiftly, and meaning smiles hovered over the faces of the others when Mr. Dayton and Miss Willett were mentioned or were noted in each other's company, for the flirtation was carried on briskly.

It was only flirtation to punish him for his insolence, Jennie sternly told her heart, when she caught herself musing over his words; sighing, too, sometimes, as she thought the pleasant summer was drawing to a close, and she must soon dismiss her cavalier from her side forever.

For, and her cheeks burned then, it was to her money all this winsome court was paid, and the smiles, the deference, the attentions were all for the sake of handling her grandfather's legacy.

And while the heiress sighed and mused,
the wooer was blessing the lucky hour that brought him to N— for the summer.

He had forgotten the foolish speech he had made about the heiress, and had given his heart to the woman; and he thought how proud a man might be of her beauty and taste when the voice of society praised his wife.

The day came when the full heart found vent in speech, and as the young couple walked in a shady, lovely lane, Fred's words, warm and tender, spoke the true and sincere passion in his heart.

It was some moments before the answer came.

It was well for her composure then that he turned abruptly from her, and strode rapidly homeward, leaving her to turn into a narrow by-path in the woods, and sob out all her pain in solitude.

For she realized now, in bitter humiliation, that whatever Fred Dayton had sought in wooing, he had won her heart.

As the tears chased one another down her cheeks, one of the unerring instincts of true love came into her heart, and she felt deeply and keenly that the love she had insulted and rejected, was not the false suit of a fortune-hunter, but the true heart—seeking which is the only sure guarantee for wedded happiness.

She crept slowly home at last, hiding her swollen eyes under her veil, and went to her own room.

Upon her dressing table lay a letter, and as she read it there came into her busy brain
a quick, luminous idea.

"I'll try it," she said. "My eyes are in splendid condition. I'll try it."

She took her open letter in her hand, and went mountainto into the room where lunchcon was in progress of demolition.

As she appeared, Fannie cried:
"Jennie, what is the matter? You look as if you had been crying your eyes out!"

"The S— bank is broken!"
"By Jove!" cried Tom, "all your money was in that."

Jennie hid her face on Fannie's shoulder and sobbed:

"Uncle George was married last week!"
"Never mind, Jennie. Come to my room, darling," said Fannie.

And Jennie suffered herself to be led away.

"Fred Dayton wants to see you, Jennie," said Tom, "in the parlor."

"But will you please read Uncle George's letter while I am gone?"

She found Mr. Dayton waiting in the parlor, marching up and down with true masculine impatience.

Before she went in she looked a moment
at the tall, graceful figure so buoyant with animation, the handsome face radiant now with impatient hope, and in her heart there was a glad little smile, with the refrain:
"He loves me! He loves me!"

All the gladness was banished from her step and face, however, as she slowly advanced to meet her lover.

He could wait for no formality of greeting.

Abruptly, earnestly, with his whole soul
in this voice and eyes, he said:

"Jennie, you rebuked me sharply to-day for my presumptions, insolent speech to your cousin. I acknowledge that I deserved it, but now that the money is gone, will you not believe me that the dearest wish of my heart is to win your love?"

"You are sure it is me you love?" she said, in a very low voice.

"Before I had known you a week, darling, I had quite forgotten that you were an heiress; I only knew that you were the only woman I could ever love, or whose love would be precious in my heart. Surely you may trust me now. Be my wife, and every hour shall prove to you how sincerely and tenderly I love you. Speak to me, Jennie. Why do you hide your face?"

She did not tell him it was to hide her smiling mouth, her dancing eyes, but she allowed him to draw her gently into a close embrace, to take in his own her soft little hand, and tell her sweet and loving words.

"You will be my wife?" he whispered,
and then she looked up.

"Yes, I will," she said, blushing, but looking bravely into his eyes. "For I believe you love me, and I love you with my whole heart."

"Stop!" for his lips were approaching hers, to close the speech. "Don't kiss me
yet. I forgot to mention that Uncle George drew all my money from the S— bank
before it broke, and has it in safe deposit elsewhere. Now you may kiss me."

"But, Jennie," Fannie asked, when she and Tom joined the lovers some time later,
"what on earth were you crying about?"

Jennie never told, but Mr. Tom Hogan made some guesses at a private interview, that Jennie would neither deny nor confirm.

"DANGEROUS DAYS.—An old manuscript
has been handed us labelled 'Superstitious Concepts, [I know not whose] about unlucky days.' It reads:

"There are certain days in the year which concern all persons to know because they are called perilous and dangerous, that is to say, January are eight, 1, 2, 4, 5, 10, 15, 17, and 19; February are three, 8, 10
and 12; March are three, 15, 16 and 21;
April are two, 15 and 21; May are three, 15, 17 and 20; June are two, 4 and 17; July are two, 15 and 20; August are two, 20 and 25; September are two, 6 and 7; October is one, 6; November are two, 5 and 19; December are three, 6, 7 and 11, and some people say 15 and 19."

No reasons are given for considering these days unlucky, and no clue is furnished to the authorship of the document.

An international exhibition of jewelry will be held at Groning, Holland, in the latter part of July, 1880. The most interesting feature of the display will probably be a collection of tools employed in the manufacture of jewels and watches during the last three centuries. The prizes awarded will consist of gold, silver, and brass medals.

It looks now, remarks the Norritonton Herald, as if Columbus discovered this country for the special purpose of enabling English walkers, lecturers and opera constructors to come here and carry home thousands of dollars belonging to America.

THE "CHIT-WHEEL."

BY MAJOR H. C. HALL.

Our first field service was in Miles' railroad brigade, and our first duties were in guarding the West Virginia division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, over which passed, at that time (the early Spring of '62), the larger part of the supplies for our increasing armies about Washington and in Virginia. One company was stationed at Martinsburg, then a notable hot-bed of secession and rebellion. As many of the men were already in the rebel armies, the women boldly came forward, and assumed the duties of perpetuating the treasonable sentiments that had involved the nation in civil war.
Few of them were wanting the courage of their convictions, and they seemed to esteem
it a privilege to make known their rebellious natures, especially in the presence of Union soldiers, whenever an opportunity was offered. They loved and cherished the new Confederacy, which had guaranteed to them
the "divine institution" with all its attendant blessings and holy influences, as intensely as they hated the old government, and its volunteer defenders.

The following incidents illustrate something of the character and practices of a female Secesh in the early days of the war,
and also of the unlawful and mischievous
acts of roguish Yankee soldiers, when free from the immediate restraints of military discipline.

After lying in camp several days, and having a good record, Sergeant— and a comrade had permission to visit the town, and to be absent until sunset. The day chanced to be cloudy and dark, with an occasional shower of rain to add to its unpleasantness;
but the hearts of the boys were made light,
and their steps elastic, by the large share of accumulated curiosity they had to gratify before they should return. Suitably armed with proper passes, they quickly walked up the main street, and were soon enjoying the sights in this hazy old burrough. When it must have been nearly noon, and they had made the tour of the town, and were leisuredly walking up the main street again, their attention was turned to a well-dressed, middle-aged lady coming down the street in front of them, who, when she was about to meet them, suddenly stopped, turned her face to the wall, and then stood back to them and to the street, until they were well past her, when she turned again and resumed her way. The boys thought this a singular freak of feminine modesty, else she must be an escaped subject of a lunatic asylum, who feared recognition and apprehension, and they turned and watched her further. In a moment she came to the provost marshal's office, where a flag (the stars and stripes) was suspended from a second story window over the sidewalk, in front of the office door. Her quick eye caught the waving folds before she passed beneath it, and she stopped again. She gave it a scornful look, and with a violent shaking of her head, exclaimed in tones so loud as to be heard by all about her, "No! I won't! I won't! I won't!" The scene was now getting interesting. To go under it she would not; to go over it she could not; to retreat with so many eyes upon her, she dare not. One way only remained; to take to the street, and go around it; and this she did not hesitate to do. She quickly mounted the curb-stone, and raising her dress higher, and gathering it closer about her, bravely leaped into the soft mud, more than ankle deep, waded around the hated flag to the sidewalk
again, and, with head erect and step majestic, once more resumed her way. The boys resolved that she must be a secession mas-tress, and decided to follow her, and ascertain more of her nature and habits. She turned the first corner to the right, and they soon saw her enter a respectable dwelling, not far up the street. In a moment after she entered, they were at the door. A rap brought a servant, whom they unbidden, followed to the sitting-room, which was then without occupants, where they, uninvited, took and occupied the best seats. The servant, frightened at the bold appearance of her uncouth callers, fled to her mistress, who was doubtless at this time making needed changes in her wardrobe. Soon, however, a vinegary looking individual, of the female persuasion appeared at the door, whom they readily recognized as the crazy secessh they had seen on the street. The knowledge of the presence of Yankee soldiers in her house mortified and maddened her exceedingly, but the sight of the hated creatures actually in possession of her best room, was more than she could endure. The boys rose to greet her kindly as she entered,
but no reciprocal greetings had she for them.
In sharpest, cynical tones, expressive of her looks and appearance, she commanded them to leave her house at once, as she would not be insulted by the presence even of Yankee soldiers under her roof. The secessionist had seen something of the world, and was not easily terrified, was equal to the occasion. He assumed an air of gentlemanly dignity, and with smooth and kindly words, implored the lady's pardon for what he was sorry to learn was an unwelcome intrusion into the sanctity of her home, and he begged her to be assured that their call was made in no spirit of insult or unkindness, but rather to form acquaintances and associations which might be mutually pleasant and profitable, and which would be gladly remembered when the war should cease and the Union be restored; and he assured her further that the life and duties of camp had become tiresome, and they felt that a stroll
among citizens, even in a strange town, would afford them relaxation and rest; besides, army rations were getting distasteful, and as the Southern people, where they were known, were noted for their generosity and hospitality. They hoped to regale their palates with a good, civil dinner before they should return; "and now, madam," said he, "if you will be so kind as to furnish us with a little of the staff of life from your well stored pantry, you will greatly oblige us,

and be assured you will be remembered by us with lasting gratitude." This was enough—
"Feed a Yankee soldier!" she exclaimed, in burning words of most repelsible contempt, white lightning fires flashed from her eyes, and her whole frame trembled and shook as though she were the mother of earthquakes. Hot words as from the crater of an active volcano fell furiously and fast, until her pent-up rage was spent.
Weeping followed her wrathful demonstrations, and when she could give no further utterance to her angered feelings, she reluctantly retired, and left them in peaceful possession of the room. When the comrade had recovered somewhat, and sensible of the justice of the stinging rebuke they had received, he whispered to the sergeant, and said, "Let us go now sergeant; we will certainly get into trouble, if we haven't already." "Not a bit of it," returned the sergeant, whose accustomed coolness and courage were yet undisturbed. "I'm going to have some dinner here, yet. No woman who hates the old flag shall ever drive me!"
"All right," said the comrade, gathering courage from the other's coolness, "I'll stay as long as you." They seated themselves again, and were busy for awhile with the pictures and paintings upon the walls of the well furnished room; but the time soon began to drag heavily, and their empty stomachs yearned for food. It must now be past dinner time for the family; indeed, they could already scent the cooking food. Occasionally she would pass the door, evidently for the purpose of ascertaining if they were yet there. At length the sergeant ventured to ask her the time of day, little expecting a reply; but she did condescend to tell him in subdued tones, indicating a change in her temper and feelings, that her clock didn't go, but that she thought it must be nearly night. A thought struck the comrade. Anything to delay, and enable them to get a dinner—and he said to the sergeant in tones intended for her ear, "Perhaps you might fix it for her, Sergeant. You know you were a jeweler at home, and used to do such things." A happy thought, and a happy effect. She stepped back, and half imploringly enquired, "Are you really a jeweller, sir? and do you think you could fix my clock? I would give anything in the world to have it keep time again. I miss it so much, and we haven't a jeweller in town."

"Yes," said the sergeant, who comprehended
the situation, "that was my business before I entered the army, and I presume I could set it all right if I had time, but it is getting late, and we are very hungry, and must return to camp at once." "Oh," she replied, "it isn't so very late yet, and your dinner is all ready to put on to the table. Do wait and dine with us. I should be so glad to have the dear old clock going once more.
It is such a loss." She hastened out and ordered the table spread at once, trusting to entrap them with a good warm dinner, that she might have the old clock set in order again. The boys waited very patiently, reading each other's thoughts, and exchanging happy smiles. The idea of leaving when the fruits of their waiting were just to be grasped! In a few minutes a pale, but pleasant feminine face appeared, and announced, "Dinner is all ready, gentlemen; walk right in this way." She led, and without further persuasion they followed to the dining room, where she set them down to a dinner "fit for a king." Because it was getting late, at her request they freely helped themselves, and it is needless to say they sat there a long time, and eminently sustained their voracious reputations. When they had concluded, and the well-spread table was about bare of food, they were ushered into the presence of the silent old clock,—doubtless "grandfather's clock." It was an old-fashioned piece, and stood in a corner of the room occupying all the space from the floor to the ceiling. The sergeant, who had scarcely ever seen the inside of a clock before in his life, softly opened the door of the sacred box and gave the pendulum a gentle swing, but no tick responded. He gazed at its wonderful works for a moment in apparent study, and then deliberately remarked, weighing each word as it was uttered, "I think it will have to come down; the trouble is internal."

She nodded assent. He then called for such implements as he thought might be about the house. A nail hammer and a screwdriver were brought him. In a few minutes he had all the fastenings removed,
and the ancient relic in a horizontal position on the floor. The good woman remained in the room until this was done and then, with a semi-mourful look into the upturned face of the dear old time-teller, and a gentle word of caution to the "jeweller" who had now won her fullest confidence by his seemingly honest and gentlemanly demeanor, she left them for a time to attend to her household duties. The boys now worked like beavers, and in a short time the complex creature was entirely dissected, the larger parts lying loosely about the floor, and the smaller pieces piled in a promiscuous heap upon the table. When this had been done they returned and anxiously inquired if they had ascertained the trouble yet. "Yes, madam," said the sergeant, affecting a feeling of satisfaction, "it is as I expected, the chit wheel is gone." "Indeed!" she exclaimed, somewhat astonished at the announcement; "and it can be fixed, can't it?" she continued inquiringly. "O yes," said the sergeant, confidently. "If I had a piece of plate brass and a small file I could make one in a few minutes; and if you will let me send my comrade to the hardware store and tinmiths, and get them we will have it up and going in a short time after he returns." "Yes, indeed," she replied, "let him go at once, for you know just what is wanted. What will be the probable cost?"

"O, but a trifle," said the sergeant, "fifty cents will buy them both." The fifty cents
—two twenty-five cent pieces, hard money
—were willingly brought and trustingly placed in the hands of the "jeweller," who took them and in her presence gave them to the comrade with suitable instructions sup-
eye. The comrade departed at once and was not unmindful of his instructions, particularly that part indicated by the eye. He walked quickly down to the Main street with the silver pieces jingling in his pocket, glad to get out of an unpleasant position so easily, and waited about the corner for the approach of the sergeant, who, he believed, would soon cleverly effect his escape. The good lady now sought to entertain her new friend and benefactor until his comrade should return, and in this, for a time, she was successful, for he was an attentive listener—when it was a necessity—and he often added a word to aid her in the further and fuller expression of her thoughts. Occasionally her eyes would instinctively fall upon the scattered remains of the dear old clock, and a glad smile would light up her sad face as she thought of the time when she should again hear the music of its measured tick, tick; look upon its old familiar face once more, and read the minutes as they came and go; and, in the silent, sleepless hours of night when thoughts are of loved ones on the field braving dangers and enduring hardships, she should hear its sweet bell tones mark the slow moving time and enliven, cheer and comfort a husband-less home. But, alas, poor woman! The bright dreams of her heavenly Confederacy and the fond hopes of her dear old clock were beyond the pale of realization, as she soon sadly learned. When it was time for the comrade to return, the sergeant watched the windows apparently to discover the welcome appearing. But no comrade appeared. He grew a little nervous as he saw signs of suspicion of his treachery in the good woman's eyes, but he rallied his mental reserves and successfully dismissed her, and regained his wonted coolness. But the question of his escape was yet unsolved.

Soon she began to be uneasy again, and with her uneasiness came also his nervousness. The memory of the morning storm was yet fresh in his mind and he most earnestly desired to escape before the gathering tempest should burst upon him. He gave her "tally" or what would have been "tally" had there been any such thing in those days, and yet he grew more fearful each moment lest she should esteem it as such. He must go at once, but how?
Should he, a gentleman and a soldier, ignominiously surrender and confess, or should he cowardly retreat, and from what? "No," he said in silence, straightening himself to his full height, "I'll be no sneak; I'll retire
as boldly as I entered, and with her favor, though the old clock be past repair." Then a happy thought struck him. A way of escape was yet open, and she would not suspect him, and with a little effort he regained his self-control. He told her the pass for the two to be absent was written on one and the same paper, and that he had it in his pocket as he proved to her by producing and exhibiting a piece of paper with writing on it—his own pass,—and he told her with all the earnestness and sincerity
he could command that the other poor fellow, passless, had without doubt been picked up by the provost guard and placed in confinement, where he must remain in disgrace until the facts in his case could be made known to the provost marshal of the town, and he begged her to permit him to go and procure the other's release, which done he could get the file and brass and return at once and soon have the old clock restored to life and duty. He appeared so honest in his statements and so earnest in his interest, that she kindly bade him go and return as soon as he could. He gladly departed and with long strides soon reached the Main street where he found his comrade impatiently waiting his arrival. Each grasped the other's hand and with a round of good heartily laughter at the success that had attended their debut into Southern society, they set out for camp, wealthier and wiser than when they left in the morning. They reported their return, and in a short time, had an eager crowd of comrades listening to the story of their adventures and experiences, all of which were related with an exactness and minuteness that is impossible
here to detail, and with a fervor and enthusiasm that only roguish young soldiers can convey. Doubtless the silver pieces are yet retained as souvenirs of the excellent journey so much enjoyed.

This story soon spread through the regiment, scattered as it was, and the hero thereof was thereafter, till his promotion, known as the "chit wheel" Sergeant.

He did not so much enjoy the euphonious prefix to his title as he did the pleasure in relating the facts and circumstances connected with his obtaining it, but he bore it bravely until his commissioners came and cancelled it. What became of the poor woman and her dear old clock no Yankee ever knew, but her condition and feelings when she came to realize her situation, can doubtless, be better imagined than described. It is probable, however, that no Yankee ever thereafter stole her confidence,
or ate her dinner, and it is possible, too,
that afterwards whenever she glanced to meet a union soldier, or occasion called her to pass under the old flag she made herself less conspicuous than on that memorable morning.

and autumn months. On the 8th, Jupiter is near Mercury, and again on the 18th. On the 15th, Jupiter, Venus and Mercury are near together, and possibly visible to bright-eyed observers. Jupiter rises now about half-past 5; at the end of the month he will rise about a quarter before 4, nearly an hour and a quarter before the sun.

Venus is morning star, with nothing specially noteworthy in her history during the month. She rises now about 5; at the end of the month about a quarter after 4.

Mercury is morning star, and reaches his greatest western elongation on the 26th. He may be seen for a few days before and after that event, as it is one of the three favorable times during the year, when he is visible to the naked eye as a morning star. This busy and swift-footed planet rises now about half-past five; at the end of the month about four.

Mars is evening star, and enjoys the distinction of being the only planet visible at night. He is leaving Aldebaran behind and plunging in his headlong career among the smaller stars of Taurus and Gemini. On the 26th he will be directly north of the brilliant star Sirius. Mars sets now about half an hour after midnight; at the end of the month he sets about a quarter of an hour before midnight.

Uranus is evening star, but traveling so far away as to become a difficult object for naked-eye observation. He rises now about 3; at the close of the month about 1.

The April moon falls on the 24th. The waning moon is near Venus on the 7th, and near Mercury and Jupiter on the 8th. The new moon of the 9th is near Saturn on the day of her change, near Mars on the 15th, and near Uranus on the 20th.

The interest of the month concentrates on the morning stars, for after the 7th, Venus, Jupiter, Mercury and Saturn are all numbered on the list.—Providence Journal.

Press Excursions.—The details of the annual excursion of the Massachusetts Press Association have been arranged and a descriptive circular issued. The party will start from the Old Colony depot at Boston, Thursday, April 22, and go to Washington by the Fall River line to New York and by rail the remaining distance. From Washington the party go "on to Richmond," where they spend a day and a half. The trip will occupy ten days, and the total expense will be $35 for each person.

A Card.—Mrs. Dr. Welch, the only first class lady surgeon-chiropractor in the country. Rooms 35 Hanover street, Boston. Corns, bunions and bad nails removed without pain.

FUNERAL AND FURNISHING UNDERTAKER.
Having recently enlarged my warehouses, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, while broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the best cloth covered goods in this country.
All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from either town or city.
Hearse, Carriages, and Flowers handled at short notice and at low prices. At the old stand, No. 8 Montvale Avenue, near corner of Main street, Woburn, April 8, 1880.

A REMARKABLE CURE
—BY—
Mrs. JULIE MYERS' Drawing and Healing Salve,
Boston, Feb. 13, 1880.
Mrs. MYERS: Dear Madam—July 22, 1864, I received a blow from the hoof of a horse, causing a compound fracture of the lower bones of the leg. After being treated by two skillful doctors, and getting no better, I went to the City Hospital, where I remained more than six months under the care of our best hospital physicians, but not seeing any improvement in my condition, I left. About the 1st of January, a friend advised me to try your salve, and by its virtues I am a well man today. My ulcers are all healed, and I can walk without lameness. I would advise any one afflicted in any such way to give it a fair trial. Yours respectfully,

A REMARKABLE CURE
—BY—
Mrs. JULIE MYERS' Drawing and Healing Salve,
Boston, Feb. 13, 1880.
Mrs. MYERS: Dear Madam—July 22, 1864, I received a blow from the hoof of a horse, causing a compound fracture of the lower bones of the leg. After being treated by two skillful doctors, and getting no better, I went to the City Hospital, where I remained more than six months under the care of our best hospital physicians, but not seeing any improvement in my condition, I left. About the 1st of January, a friend advised me to try your salve, and by its virtues I am a well man today. My ulcers are all healed, and I can walk without lameness. I would advise any one afflicted in any such way to give it a fair trial. Yours respectfully,
J. E. ALLEN, 45 Bedford street.

A PROMISING YOUNG LITERATEUR.—A veteran schoolmaster of our acquaintance gives an example of youthful appreciation of poetry. He is in the habit of reading to his classes some of the best poetry from the great authors and asking his scholars to interpret them. The other day, having Goldsmith under consideration, he read from "The Traveller":

"Alas! all ages—dames of ancient days
Have led their children through the mirthful maze;
And the gay gauds, skilled in gentle lore,
Has frisked beneath the burden of threescore, and asked what the poet meant by the expression "mirthful maze." No one responded for a time, but at last a boy hesitatingly raised his hand. "Well, John," said the teacher, "what do you think is meant by 'mirthful maze'?" "I do not know, sir," said the young American, "unless it might be Indian corn!"

THE GREATEST BLESSING.—A simple, pure, harmless remedy, that cures every time, and prevents disease by keeping the blood pure, stomach regular, kidneys and liver active, is the greatest blessing ever conferred upon man. Hop Bitters is that remedy, and its proprietors are being blessed by thousands who have been saved and cured by it. Will you try it? See another column.

THE MIDLOTHIAN MINING CO.

Works at Tuscarora, Nevada.

Office 63 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

Stock forever unobtainable. 100,000 shares, par value $25 each, of which 20,000 shares are placed in the treasury as working capital. This company is free from debt and owns the Midlothian Mine, of over 20 acres, on a well-defined and explored true vein of rich gold and silver ore, sufficiently developed to indicate an inexhaustible supply, yielding many times the cost of mining. The location is in the immediate vicinity of several rich silver-producing regions, now being profitably worked. Mr. W. S. Hillman, Sup't of the Mine, is now in the East for the purpose of procuring machinery, &c., and can be seen at the office of the company a few days, where he will be pleased to give any desired information. By vote of the Directors, 5000 shares of the treasury stock was offered at $2.00 per share, a portion of which is yet for sale and can be secured on early application, in lots desired. This is the only stock of this company ever offered for sale, and at bottom price.

This gives every promise of being one of the most valuable mines in the State of Nevada, and of yielding to those who succeed in obtaining any of the stock now offered a return of many times the amount invested.

Orders by mail promptly attended to. Call upon or address W. S. HILLMAN, Sup't, 62 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

A WORD

IN REGARD TO JOB PRINTING.

We would inform the people of Woburn and vicinity that we have thoroughly overhauled and renovated the stock of printing material in the office of the Woburn Journal. Old type has been removed and old machinery discarded to give place to a large assortment of new and stylish type, a new job press, etc. Within the past week we have added one thousand dollars worth of new material to the already large stock, giving us facilities for turning out work in every particular equal to any city office, and at a less price. We do not intend to be beaten in quality of work, reasonableness of charge, or in promptness in filling all orders entrusted to us. We are prepared to furnish estimates for any kind of work, from the smallest label to the largest poster, and from the cheapest circular to the most elegant engraved wedding cards and invitations. We have also made arrangements with a large book-binding establishment whereby we can execute all orders in that line of business our patrons may entrust to us at the same price charged at the bindery, thus saving Woburn people all trouble except to leave their books or magazines at our office. If it is not convenient to call at our office a postal card addressed to us will secure the prompt attendance of a person competent to estimate upon any printing you may require. A full line of samples of Bufford's chromocards, wedding cards and invitations, business and address cards, etc., etc. We aim to do good work at a fair price, and on that basis solicit your patronage.

Respectfully,

FRENCH & ANDREWS.

"Advertising Pays."

—Said the Printer.

"YES I KNOW."

—Said the successful Merchant.

Advertising pays. That is a fact settled years ago, and requires no argument to demonstrate, other than the argument of the thousands of men who have made fortunes through its aid. The only question is, How to do it; and that is easy of solution. Advertise where you want to sell your goods. Advertise the goods that are salable and seasonable. Advertise systematically and persistently. Advertise specialties; don't attempt to make a newspaper notice take the place of an inventory of your stock. Study the science of advertising as you do the texture of your fabrics, and you will find that it pays. We have made a considerable reduction in our rates for yearly advertisements, and invite the business men of Woburn to consider whether it would not be for their advantage to be represented in the columns of the WOBURN JOURNAL.

HOW IT IS.

When the enterprising poet isn't writing,
Some melancholy verses about love,
About love,
It is safe to bet that he will be inditing,
The trifling,
A sonnet on the whiteness of the dove,
Of the dove.

When the young and tender school girl isn't thinking
Of the time when she'll be allowed to vote,
Toward to vote,
The chances are that she is coyly thinking,
Coyly thinking,
At some young man in a zebra overcoat,
Overcoat.

THE JINERS.

She was forty-five years old, well dressed,
had black hair rather thin and tinged with gray, and eyes in which gleamed the fire of a determination not to be easily balked.
She walked into Major Huse's office in Patten's block, and requested a private interview, and having obtained it, and satisfied herself that the few students were not list-lessly at the key hole, said slowly, solemnly and impressively, "I want a divorce."

"What for?" I supposed you had one of the best of husbands," said the Major.
"I suppose that's what everybody thinks,
but if they knew what I've suffered in ten years, they'd wonder I hadn't scalded him long ago. I ought to, but for the sake of the young ones, I've told him, though, what he might depend on, and now the time's come, I won't stand it, young ones or no young ones, I'll have a divorce, and if the neighbors
want to blab themselves hoarse about it, let them, for I won't stand it another day."

"But what's the matter? Don't your husband provide for you? Don't he treat you kindly?" pursued the lawyer.
"We get victuals and I don't know but he's as true and kind as men in general; and he's never knocked none of us down. I wish he had, then, I'd get him into jail and know where he was at night," retorted the woman.

"Then, what's your complaint against him?"

"Well, if you must know, he's one of them playboy jiners."

"A jiner; one of them pesky fools that's always jining something. There can't be nothing come along that's dark and sly and hidden but he'll jine it. If anybody should get up a society to jine his honest down, he'd jine it just as soon as he could get in; and if he had to pay to get in, he'd go all the sooner. We hadn't been married more'n two months before he jined the Know Nothings. We lived on a farm then, and every Saturday night he'd come tearin' in before supper, and grab a fistful of nutcases and go off knowing 'em, and that's the last I'd see of him till morning. And every other night he was there; I ought to put my foot down then; but he looked me with so many lies about the Pope's coming to make all the Yankee girls marry Irishmen, and to eat up all the babies that wasn't born with a cross on their foreheads, that I let him go on and encourage him in it."

"Then he jined the Masons. 'Praps you know what that be, but I don't," they think they're the same kind of critters that built Solomon's temple and took care of his concubines, and all that darned nonsense and gab about worshipful masters and squares and compasses and such like, that we had in the house for the next six months you never see the beat. And he's never outgrown it, neither. What do you think of a man that does that?"

"I don't like him," said the Major. "He is a white apron, 'bout big enough for a mon-key's bib, and go marching up and down, making motions and talking the foolish-lingo at a picture of George Washington in a green jacket, and a star on his stomach. I don't like a loony-tyke? Well, that's my Sam, and I stood it as long as I'm goin' to."
"The next lounge the fool made was into the Old Fellows. I made it warm for him when he came home and told me he had jined them; but he kinder pacified me by telling me that they had sort of a branch shop that took in women, and he'd get me in as soon as he found out how to do it."

NOTEWORTHY FEATURES.

1. The evidence it affords of the continued, steady growth of the Company.

(a) The entire volume of business has been increased during the year $2,185,610, and now reaches $27,417,702 in value of policies.

(b) The assets have been increased $2,919,461.98 and now amount to $38,096,952.60.

(c) The surplus for dividends has been increased $309,434.84 and now amounts to $38,154,745.49. This is the net surplus (exclusive of Tontine surplus) which is $1,271,482.18, computed by the liabilities by the Company's own standard, the less (1st standard) established by the statute reduces the liabilities about $1,900,000 and raises the surplus to over $7,000,000.

The steady and almost uniform growth of this Company, the past decade has, in view of the bad times through which the country has been passing, been very remarkable. It is shown by the following summary:-

Year. Insurance in force. Assets, including Tontine surplus.

1870.....$11,701,701.48

1871.....12,164,803.25

1872.....12,592,606.96

1873.....12,930,228.97

1874.....13,236,123.12

1875.....13,512,119.19

1876.....13,768,173.73

1877.....14,001,287.87

1878.....14,222,144.94

1879.....14,437,793.38

*Estimated—Mass. Standard.

Note that increase of Assets and Surplus has more than kept pace with the increase of risks in force.

2. The high character of the securities in which the funds of the Company are invested. This is shown by the fact that the due and accrued interest uncollected on January 1, was only $317.11, or about one and a half month's interest on the assets. Securities upon which the interest is paid with this remarkable punctuality must be of a very high order.

The market value of the securities owned by the Company is $811,520.98 greater than their cost. This Company has never had to deduct or apologize for the character of its investments. In managing its fund the trustees have always pursued a conservative policy and been satisfied with a reasonable rate of interest.

It makes no water investments.

3. Comparing the progress of this Company during 1879 with the other Great Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, whose size and prominent position justifies reference to it for purposes of comparison, we find increase of Assets, Surplus and Income.

Intentionally speak of the brighter aspects of the voyage on sea and ocean.

There were other days and nights bringing shadows dark and deep, of which the best remembrance now is, that they are past.

All the way I am cheered by the memory of the pleasant homes and kind hearts that I have left behind and by the hope of return.

In the waking hour of last night when your time of gathering had come, I could almost hear the voice of prayer (that was lifted for me) and the words of peace in mutual edification that were spoken, and my prayer was offered for you that God will increase you more and more in all the excellent graces of patience and watchfulness, of discretion and good understanding, of brotherly kindness and charity.

The more I see of the people in these old lands of the East, the more I am impressed with the immensity of the blessing which the Bible has brought to us, and the sacredness of the mission of the American people to show how pure and noble, how prosperous and strong any nation can be made by the truth as it is in Jesus.

I beseech you, my dear friends, to consider that that high calling into glory and virtue is yours; and in answering its demands, do everything in your power to help each other to a larger, deeper exercise of the true life that is in Christ. Bear all things, hope all things, endure all things, that the spirit of Jesus may be manifest in you all, and that the truth of Jesus may give wisdom and knowledge and salvation to the world.

And now, writing as if I had been present in your meeting last night, and speaking its closing word, I send over the sea on its journey of six thousand miles, this benediction—grace, mercy and peace to you all. Your affectionate friend and pastor,
DANIEL MARCH.

A Fast Day at the Pilgrim's Landing.

At 10.30 a. m., after a ride of about forty-six miles, a party of gentlemen and ladies, the former members of our worthy legislature, the latter wives and lady friends, found themselves at the ancient town of Plymouth.

On arriving at the "Samoset House"

where we were made welcome by the genial proprietor, we were introduced to Mr. Whitman, clerk of the courts for Plymouth county, and to Major Morrissey, who served for so long a time as sergeant-at-arms at the state house previous to the appointment of Capt. Mitchell. These venerable gallant gentlemen were to be our guides for the day.

We proceeded first to Pilgrim hall where we were shown many things that had been owned and used by the pilgrims; the sword used by Miles Standish, also many other ancient implements of warfare; a model of the "Mayflower"; the chair of John Carver; the cradle of Peregrine White; the Indian Bible from which we read the verse, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." At each end of the hall hangs a large painting—"The Embarkation" and "The Landing." We then went to the rock upon which our forefathers first set foot. A large canopy of Quincy granite is built over the spot with a small opening in the base where a portion of the rock is seen, and large enough for a person to step down on to the rock. The bones of the pilgrims were taken from their burial places and sent to Boston to be examined by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, to prove that they were bones of the white men, and not of the Indians, and then were placed in a box and enclosed in the top of the canopy, that truly the bones of the pilgrims rest upon the rock upon which they first landed. There is also a large piece of the rock in the yard in front of Pilgrim hall.

We next went to the old burying ground on the hill where so many of the descendants of the pilgrims are buried. It was truly a grim sight. Some of the quaint old headstones were covered with moss; some of the inscriptions had become nearly obliterated by age, yet now and then we could trace one as early as 1670. We were shown the grave of Gov. Bradford, and were told that two Indians were buried at his feet. Much love and kindness was shown by him to the more prominent Indians requested that when they died, they should be buried at the feet of him they so much loved, and their request was granted. Our next place of interest was the court house where we were shown the ancient records, and the clerk read some amusing selections from the old church records, showing the manner of church discipline in the early days of Massachusetts. We saw also an old book "THE JUSTIFICATION of the Separation from the Church of England," published in 1620.

Our guides took us next to the monument erected to the memory of the pilgrims. This is an immense structure but not yet finished; when completed it will be one of the finest monuments in the country. It is located on a hill about three quarters of a mile from the center of the town, the view from which is magnificent. Looking down the harbor over the waters blue, we could see away off towards the horizon, Provincetown, and we did not wonder that the pilgrims left that barren, sandy shore and came to the rocky shore of Plymouth.

On our return to the "Samoset" dinner awaited us, and never did hungry mortals sit down to a more tempting feast; everything was well prepared; and the bread and butter—well, the like of it was never seen in Massachusetts, and I think the new Senator from Suffolk would testify to the truth of my statement.

But we must say good-bye to the "Samoset" and its proprietor and clerk who have entertained us so well, and take the train for Boston. On our return we passed through Duxbury, where it is supposed John Alden is buried; through Marshfield over the meadows and brooks where the great Webster was wont to roam and fish; through the quaint old town of Hingham, one of the oldest in our state, on through Quincy, getting a peep at the old homestead of John Quincy Adams, and finally landing in Boston, and all concluding that we had passed a happy Fast Day.

LETTER FROM DR. MARCH.

PORT OF ALEXANDRIA, March 24, 1880.

To the Wednesday evening meeting at Woburn, Dear Friends:—It is with increased satisfaction and gratitude that I report to you again the successful prosecution of my journey until now. I have reached this ancient and crowded gateway of the East. At Naples the very person whom I least expected, came on board, Rev. Mr. Dale, the associate of my son in the Mission at Zahleh. He had been to visit his brother at Nice, and was on his way back to Syria.

He saw Mr. Newhall at Nice, and learned from him that I was on the way. We had long conversations about affairs at the Mission, and he has gone far towards convincing me that it may be a very serious question whether it will be best for my son to change his field and go to Aleppo. Mr. Dale of course speaks the Arabic freely, and he has relieved me of all trouble in dealing with the clamorous boatmen in the harbor here at Alexandria, and he will do likewise at the landing at Jaffa and Beirut. So I shall go on with him directly to Beirut. I have sent a telegram to my son informing him that I shall arrive on Tuesday morning, the 30th of March. I expect he will be at Beirut and will come off to meet me on the arrival of the ship on the roadstead of that city. We remain here until Saturday, taking in and discharging freight, and then pass to Port Gall, and from there to Jaffa and Beirut.

We had a quiet run all the way from Naples. The haze that obscured the sky of southern Italy and veiled Vesuvius behind its shadowy film, cleared up when we passed Messina, and the sea shone bright and blue beneath the sun of the morning, and the half-grown moon at night. The wind blew scarcely enough to fill the sail and steady the ship. The Sabbath morning came clear and calm as ever shone on sea or shore. The deck was steady as the floor of the sanctuary in which you were gathered for worship. The deep lay beneath us smooth and bright as the crystal sea beside which the blessed walk, in the land where the night and storm of earth never come. On the left Calabria presented its bare rocky wall to the sea with a fringe of snow covering the upper heights. In the rear Etna lifted its vast rounded mass far above the clouds that lay soft and motionless about its base. The upper ranges were all white with snow, and the mountain looked like some mighty monarch throned and desolate in the solitude of the sea. All through the Sabbath and the night following, the sea seemed to have listened to the divine command to remember the day of rest and keep it holy. Our ship run with so quiet a motion that it seemed no motion at all. When Monday morning came the sun of the Orient shone with dazzling brightness upon the course which we were pursuing, and it seemed as if we were sailing into the dawn along a gathering of light so brilliant that we could not look upon it, nor could we imagine the scenes of beauty and splendor to which we were coming. All the romantic dreams of the gorgeous East were realized by that morning sail into the sunrise over the smooth surface of the Mediterranean, that lay like a sea of glass beneath our ship.

Intentionally speak of the brighter aspects of the voyage on sea and ocean. There were other days and nights bringing shadows dark and deep, of which the best remembrance now is, that they are past. All the way I am cheered by the memory of the pleasant homes and kind hearts that I have left behind and by the hope of return. Some of the quaint old headstones were covered with moss; some of the inscriptions had become nearly obliterated by age, yet now and then we could trace one as early as 1670. We were shown the grave of Gov. Bradford, and were told that two Indians were buried at his feet. Much love and kindness was shown by him to the more prominent Indians requested that when they died, they should be buried at the feet of him they so much loved, and their request was granted. Our next place of interest was the court house where we were shown the ancient records, and the clerk read some amusing selections from the old church records, showing the manner of church discipline in the early days of Massachusetts. We saw also an old book "THE JUSTIFICATION of the Separation from the Church of England," published in 1620.

Our guides took us next to the monument erected to the memory of the pilgrims. This is an immense structure but not yet finished; when completed it will be one of the finest monuments in the country. It is located on a hill about three quarters of a mile from the center of the town, the view from which is magnificent. Looking down the harbor over the waters blue, we could see away off towards the horizon, Provincetown, and we did not wonder that the pilgrims left that barren, sandy shore and came to the rocky shore of Plymouth.

On our return to the "Samoset" dinner awaited us, and never did hungry mortals sit down to a more tempting feast; everything was well prepared; and the bread and butter—well, the like of it was never seen in Massachusetts, and I think the new Senator from Suffolk would testify to the truth of my statement.

But we must say good-bye to the "Samoset" and its proprietor and clerk who have entertained us so well, and take the train for Boston. On our return we passed through Duxbury, where it is supposed John Alden is buried; through Marshfield over the meadows and brooks where the great Webster was wont to roam and fish; through the quaint old town of Hingham, one of the oldest in our state, on through Quincy, getting a peep at the old homestead of John Quincy Adams, and finally landing in Boston, and all concluding that we had passed a happy Fast Day.

REGISTERING WOMEN VOTERS IN BOSTON.

—We are indebted to a "staff correspondent" for the following anecdote concerning the recent registration of female voters in Boston. Its accuracy is vouched for by an eminent artist—one of the most distinguished stone-cutters of the Hub.

Enter old lady of a certain age.

"I wish to register, sir."

"Your name, please?"

"Alma Jane Simpson."

"Your age?"

"Beg pardon, sir."

"Your age?"

"I don't understand that I must give my age?"

"Yes, miss, the law requires it."

"Worlds, sir, would not tempt me to give it! Not that I care. No! I had as lief wear it on my bonnet, as a hackman does his number; but I'm a twin, and if my sister has a weakness, it is that she dislikes any reference made to her age; and I could not give my own, because I don't wish to offend her.—Harper's for May.

A RECOMMENDATION.—As a writer of testimonials, commend us to Gail Hamilton. Recently an Irish girl applied to the principal of the State Normal school, at Salem, Massachusetts, for a situation as cook, and exhibited with pride the following testimonial from G. H.:

"Margaret F.—I have lived with me fourteen weeks. I have found her invariably good tempered, amiable (dirty), cheerful, obliging, catinosa (destructive), respectful, and incoercible. She is a better cook than any Irish girl I have ever employed, and one of the best bread-makers I ever saw. With neatness and carefulness and economy, she would make an excellent servant. I heartily recommend her to all Christian philanthropists, and her employers to Divine mercy.—Harper's for May.

Sick people in Massachusetts can continue to die with the aid of regular or irregular doctors, as they like,—the senate having rejected the bill limiting the choice to the rival pathologists.

THE BIRD WITH A BROKEN WING.

I walked in the woodland meadow,
Where sweet the thrushes sing,
And I found on a bed of mosses
A bird with a broken wing.
I healed the wound, and each morning
I sang its old sweet strain;
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

I found a youth, life broken
By sin's seductive art,
And touched with Christ-like pity
I took him to my heart.
He lived with me, his purpose,
And struggled not to vain;
But the soul with a broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

But the bird with a broken pinion
Kept another from the nest,
And the life that sin had stricken
Ran another's life to rest.
Each lost his compensation,
There were healings for each pain;
But a bird with a broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

—H. Butterworth.

"GEORGE ELLIOT."—Of the birth and education of Marion Evans—"George Elliot"—little is certainly known. She is said by some to have been the daughter of a clergyman, by whom she was educated, and by others that she was the friend, ward, and adopted daughter of Herbert Spencer, who conducted her education. She never married, and she died at the age of 45 years, after a long illness. She was a Quaker, and her religious convictions were the basis of her life. She was a prolific writer, and her works are of great value to the world. Her most famous work is "Middlemarch," which is a masterpiece of fiction. She also wrote "The Mill on the Floss," "Silmarillion," and "The Secret Garden." Her works are characterized by their realism and their deep insight into human nature.

By the English law of divorce neither party is absolved from the marriage bond on account of the infidelity of the other unless the one who asks freedom can claim to have been faithful to his or her own vow. This Mr. Lewis could not do. The acquaintance between Mr. Lewis and Miss Evans became more than friendship, and they resolved to live together, which they did. Upon the death of Mr. Lewis's first wife he and Miss Evans were legally married. Another version of the story is, that the first wife eloped with a young man, but again returned to Mr. Lewis, who forgave the offence and acknowledged her as his wife, and that a second elopement took place, which rendered a full divorce under the English laws impossible.

An English paper said, recently, "It now appears, from a sketch headed 'Our Native Land' in Mr. W. Andrew's 'Hull Miscellany,' that George Elliot, Miss Mary Anne Evans, is the daughter of the late Mr. Robert Evans, bailiff to Lord Howe and Sir Roger Newdigate, at Catow, near Nuneaton, Warwickshire, and sister to Mr. Isaac P. Evans."

The new MILITIA UNIFORMS.—For infantry there is a dark blue cassimere, double-breasted coat, seven buttons in each row, standing collar, one and one-quarter inches high at back, and one inch high in front, cut square to hook in front; cloth facings of blue, same color as trousers, on collar, cuffs and back of skirts; shoulder straps of facing cloth let into seam at point of shoulder, to button at collar with one small button; three small buttons on each cuff, three large buttons on facing of each skirt, and one small button on facing of collar at each side. Brass regimental number or letter on each side of collar in front. Inside pocket in left breast to open perpendicularly. For mounted troops, the coat is the same, but for foot troops, except that facings will be of scarlet for artillery, and yellow for cavalry, with braid of color of facings on back seams.

The infantry trousers are of sky blue kersey, cut zouave pattern, plaited into waistband with six plaits in front and six behind; inner seams open for two inches at the bottom; hem and draw-string at bottom. Pockets in side seams, watch pocket in waist seam at right side; no hip pocket. Strap and buckle on back, below waistband. For cavalry and artillery, sky blue kersey straight trousers, cut loose without plaits; bottoms to spread well over boot. Pockets in side seams, watch pocket in waist seam at right side; no hip pocket. Strap and buckle on back below waistband; four buttons at bottom of each leg, two on each side for straps.

The blouse is a dark blue flannel, single-breasted sack coat, without lining, rolling collar to button up close to the neck, one row of four large buttons in front; one inside pocket, opening perpendicularly.

The leggings for the infantry are of oak or hemlock grain leather, fourteen to sixteen inches long, with strap under instep and at top to buckle outside. Cut to fit the lower leg and ankle, and to spread well over boot. Five buttons and button holes, or five straps and buckles outside each leg.

The fatigue caps are dark blue cloth, with cadet shape drooping visor.

THE LAD WHO WOULD A-TISHING GO.—"Hi! sonny," said a keen-looking Chicago business man, "what are you looking for? Let me see that letter."

"I've got a letter, there's bonds in it."

"Why, I've been waiting for you this half hour to bring me those bonds—I bought 'em of what's his name?" Upon this the lad took out a big envelope marked "J. Smith, Esq., present," in the upper corner, "$2500 U. S. 5-20s," and in the lower corner, "Commission due, $5. Please remit by the bearer."

"That's all right, sonny," said the keen-looking business man as he hauled out a scantily furnished purse, gave the boy a $5 bill and a quarter, and said, "There, sonny, that quarter is a reward for your cleverness and fidelity," and putting the envelope in his breast he said, "Heaven found that the envelope contained a copy of the Chicago Times, which he could have purchased at the office for five cents."

The fish is biting very numerous to-day," said "sonny," taking out another big envelope from his pocket.—Chicago Times.

The number of different kinds of postage stamps which have hitherto been issued all over the world is estimated in round numbers at 6,000. Among them are to be found the effigies of five emperors, eighteen kings, three queens, one grand duke, six princes, one princess, and a great number of presidents, etc. Some of the stamps bear coats of arms and other emblems, as crowns, the papal keys and tiara, anchors, eagles, lions, horses, stars, serpents, railway trains, horsemen, messengers, etc. The collection preserved in the museum of the Berlin Post office included, on July 1, 1879, 4,498 specimens of different postage stamps. Of these 2462 were from Europe, 441 from Asia, 251 from Africa, 1143 from America, and 201 from Australia.

Such being the importance, popularity, and progressive nature of the country press, its conductors cannot well afford to lose the good opportunity presented to continually raise its standard, and improve it in every possible way, until it cannot be maintained that even in a small degree it occupies an obscure position, or is of little weight and influence.—Berkshire Courier.

MAY MAGAZINES.

Scissors for May is full of interesting material on subjects of general or timely interest. In addition to the book notices, literary criticism is represented by Mr. E. C. Steadman's study of Edgar A. Poe, which touches with keen insight a subject of never-failing interest to Americans, and will tend to revive the general discussion of Poe. Art criticism is represented by a paper on "The Younger Painters of America," the first of three by Mr. William stepped down to the floor, and retreating a few paces, stood perfectly quiet, evidently expecting me to go on, which I did, being anxious to improve the advantage I had already gained.

"Who are you anyway, old phosphate of lime? You can't make yourself out for a moment of our line without the very best of references. There is no family resemblance in your features, and certainly no rattle in your clothes."

He shook his head sadly, but declined to give his name, and I continued—
"You look rather thin, don't you? How did you get so thin? Where have you been boarding, old gridiron sides?" He did not speak, but rattled his fingers down his ribs like a boy drawing a stick along a flat fence.

"You must have been fatter sometime than you are now? Were you ever taken up and tried out for anything? What a lot of jack-knife handles you'd make. Why don't you apply for a situation in the anti-fat man's show window? Or you might whitewash yourself and hire out for a grape trellis."

My visitor declined to reply to these practical suggestions, but glanced toward the chimney as if about to go. I plied him with more questions.

"Which way are you traveling, stranger? Where do you put your loose change and ear tickets? Don't you carry too much ventilation for one? Don't you feel cold with this east wind blowing through you so?"

He turned his head slowly in the direction of my wardrobe.

"If you have no clothes excepting that thin chimney suit, I will lend you some; but all I have in your line is a skeleton coat and a skull cap."

He waved his left radius and ulna by way of a negative reply, and was again on the point of leaving, when a business idea came into my mind, and I spoke again.

"By the way, my much respected friend, were you acquainted about here in 1850?"

He nodded his head.

"Can you give me any information about the state of the town then?"

He nodded again, and after running his right forefinger through his left eye and scratching the inside of his bump of memory, went to the wall and began to write. I saw no pen and heard no sound, but the rapidly formed letters were large, and the phosphorescent, each fading out as the next was commenced. Some of his observations I will give, but only a small portion of what I can recall.

"Winchester is situated where it was founded a century ago. The principal features of natural scenery closely resemble those of 1880. There are some new streets and many new buildings. The dam at the center has been removed and the flats improved. Wedge pond is a little lower, but Mystic remains the same. Into the latter the state fish commissioners have dumped two hundred billions of salmon fry annually for the last 30 years, and it is confidently expected that ere long some of our private citizens will get a bite, but thus far the local fish committee have had great difficulty in hooking enough for their own tables."

"Several improvements have been made at the Highland water works. Land-locked horn pouts have become so numerous that the reservoir is pretty much solid fish. With rubber boots a man can cross it anywhere dry shod. The water commissioners have opened a fish bazar near the gate house and are making a comfortable livelihood by retailing fresh and pickled pouts. This fish has become the staple diet of the town, and the general consumption of such brain-stimulating food has had a marked influence on the intellectual and moral condition of the people. You will often see workmen hoeing potatoes or excavating drains in dress coats and light kids."

"Music has felt the influence. No hard-core virtuoso dares enter the town unless he can render Beethoven's symphonies or Bach's fugues. Even infants refuse to be lulled to sleep by the familiar strains of 'Old Dog Tray' and 'Grandfather's Clock,' but scream for Schubert and Handel."

"The moral condition of the town is in a good state of preservation. Ladies take an active part in the management of public affairs, and since the erection of the commodious town hall are in the majority at elections. The board of selectmen is composed chiefly of ladies. Animated discussions, sometimes of a semi-social character, often prolong the session rather unnecessarily, but the subjects under consideration are multifariously interesting and exhaustively treated. The admission of ladies to the police and fire departments has had a signal influence in the elevation of these organizations."

"And has indirectly given a new impetus to the gymnastic class. This has resulted in public offices and duties has opened new fields of usefulness for the sterner sex. Having more time at their disposal than formerly, they have organized and conducted a flourishing sewing society, originally intended to aid the heathen in our newly admitted Canadian states; but finding themselves unable, by the utmost diligence at the needle, to produce articles of wearing apparel in excess of home demand, they have wisely abandoned the original idea, and now designate their organization as the Gentlemen's Charitable Society for the promotion of home clothing."

"The religious sects in town are prospering. The Baptist brethren get on swimmingly for the most part; but their amphibious inclination tends to keep their heads more or less under water. The Unitarian church has been enlarged and improved. Sunday school services are held in the upper audience room, and are numerously attended, somewhat. The services in the vestries are well mounted and having a good run of crowded houses. Since the destruction of the Congregational church by fire, that society has done its worshiping by telephone. The dwelling of each parishioner is wired to a large telephone in the study of the pastor, who has the assistance of a photographic artist. The speaker stands before the instrument, and preaches in the usual manner, and his gestures are photographed and sent round by mail the next day. They have congregational singing. The new method has considered a great improvement on the old. The itinerant contribution box is unknown. Sunday travel is saved, and the time formerly wasted in Sunday dressing is reclaimed; and besides it does not interfere with home arrangements. A man can tie his telephone to one ear during service, and still have his hands free to hold the Sunday Herald, or work on the 15-14 puzzle. The telephone is convenient in many other ways. It is the utensil used by those who are pursuing the avocation technically called courting. It saves a man a tiresome walk, or perhaps the expense of the depot carriage, if he is afraid to go home alone. It also saves the wear and tear of boots and gloves, not to mention the crumpling of neck ties and lace collars. This wonderful instrument has been so improved that it transmits a whisper or a sigh, and even a kiss has been wafted over the wires, though thus far with partial success. It is said that a kiss, like an orange, loses much of its aroma in transport, and is much sweeter picked where it grows; or to state it another way, an orange loses its scent by transport, and a kiss loses its transport when sent. Another objection is that the telephonic goods are all received by the ear, and that is too unresponsive a feature to enjoy the monopoly of such a luxury. For this and other reasons the telephone has not come into general use for the interchange of these sentimental commodities, but the barter still goes on in the old-fashioned way."

"At this point my dedicated visitor ceased writing and turned to depart; but the barking of a dog arrested his attention, and he paused and glanced anxiously at me."

"Oh, yes," said I, answering his look,—"I keep a dog, but there isn't the least danger. He never takes any notice of bones picked up as clean as you are," and while I was speaking, he gradually faded away like he stood, and I awoke to hear the steam whistles blowing seven o'clock in the morning. Thus ended this secular apocalypse.

GIVEN UP BY DOCTORS.—"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"
"I assure you it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters; and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!"
"Well-a-day! That is remarkable! I will go this day and get some for my poor George—I know hops are good."

Special Notices.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
This is to certify that we, the undersigned, with our families, late members, communicants and attendants of Trinity Parish, Woburn, Mass., maintaining, as we believe, the true, charitable principles of religious worship, as averse to all coercive and compulsory measures, do declare that Whereas, the present incumbent of the office of Rector of Trinity Parish, J. Frank Winkley, has as we feel, demeaned himself during his charge in an unchristian, discourteous and intemperate manner, towards us, his parishioners; and
Whereas, said Rector, having treated with contempt the counsel of the Bishop of this Diocese, and practically usurped the entire control of all of the affairs of said parish, therefore we have Resolved: That, as members of said parish, having duly rendered our resignations to the Clerk thereof, we shall not hold ourselves responsible for any further liabilities of the same, and shall take no part in its administration until such time as the connection of the above named Winkley with the aforesaid parish shall cease to exist.

Woburn Journal.

FRIDAY, APRIL 30, 1880.

OUR NEW BOARD OF SELECTMEN are evidently not ardent disciples of the civil service reform doctrine.

IF ENISON can not make his electric light work, he can invent a patent medicine which will cure what few ills still cling to our too substantial flesh.

THE BROOKLINE CHRONICLE passes into its eighth volume tomorrow. It is a bright and entirely readable local paper; one of the best on our exchange list.

THE NEW YORK NATION is severely democratic in its reference to public men, and gives the distinguished Boston divine the plain title of "Mr. James Freeman Clarke."

GENERAL BUTLER evidently has not a high opinion of the manner in which elections are conducted in Massachusetts, as he recently said that ball-boozing in South Carolina and the shot-gun policy in Mississippi were respectable when compared with it.

THE VICTORY of the liberal party in England was not without its cost. The dukes of Westminster and Devonshire, the earl of Roseberry and Mr. Samuel Morley are said to have contributed a quarter of a million of pounds, equal to a million and a quarter of dollars—a "barrel" that must make Mr. Tilden sick with envy.

THE DANVERS MIRROR publishes a long leader in favor of the nomination of Grant and Bayard for president and vice-president on the same ticket. Such a combination of forces would be as undesirable as miraculous; and when it is possible of consummation the White House may as well be let for a "garden" for pedestrian contests and circuses, or turned into an agricultural college.

A SKETCH of the most important doings of the legislature of 1880 may be found on our first page, compiled from the excellent summary given by the Boston Daily Advertiser. More business was done than last year, reckoning by figures. In each branch the numbers in the calendar rose above eleven hundred; the house documents reached No. 378, and the senate No. 256, besides matters which, in the haste of the last days, were disposed of without appearing in the calendar.

THE INEXORABLE arm of an even-handed justice, higher and mightier than the puny law of nations and sure to impose sentence meet for the offence, has followed the notorious E. D. Winslow into his retreat of fancied security at Buenos Ayres and turned the light of the history of his crimes upon the glamour of his false life there. He is said to have married a young English girl and to have been in high favor in his adopted country before he was recognized by a Boston man and his record made known, since which time he has been socially ignored by all American residents.

ANOTHER CHAPTER in the tragical history of San Francisco was written in blood last week, when J. M. Kallach (son of I. S. Kallach, mayor of the city and champion of Denis Kearney) shot and killed Charles De Young in the office of the Chronicle newspaper. It may have been but a just act of retributive justice on the man who attempted to murder the senior Kallach, but it was certainly executed by an unauthorized person and in a criminal manner. Young Kallach will probably be hanged, and it is comforting to think how small will be the diminution of the amount of purity and goodness in the world caused by the taking out of it of these two men.

THE LEGISLATURE of 1880, which adjourned on Saturday, has not left any very brilliant works by which it shall be known and remembered in the future. Its best work has been of a protective character, in refusing its sanction to various schemes which must have been a detriment rather than a blessing to the state. It has also refused to pass measures which a majority of the people were decidedly in favor of, as the one regarding the double taxation of property and the proposition for biennial sessions. The record shows that a majority of the members were conservative men who preferred to bear those ills they had than fly to those they knew not of.

TOWNS AND COMMUNITIES as well as individuals are frequently called upon to soliloquize with Hamlet, "to be or not," and to decide quickly whether they will take the tide in their affairs at its flood and be borne on to prosperity and consequent happiness by it, or remain at the stand they have attained already. Something such a time has arrived for Woburn, though the issue, be it easy or nay, will probably neither make nor break us as a town, and it has to be decided by a few business men who have their own interests to conserve as well as those of their neighbors and the town. A manufacturing concern located in Boston finds itself in too cramped quarters to furnish all the goods of its make that the better times need, and is consequently looking about for a suitable location to remove to. Their attention was drawn to Woburn, and we understand, are favorably inclined toward our town. A condition of their coming is that a certain amount of stock in the company be taken by citizens, in order that the business may be extended and enlarged. The officers of the company have met a number of our business men, and the matter is being considered and investigated by them. We are not at liberty to give particulars as yet, but wish simply to suggest to the gentlemen interested that they let the leaves of town pride and love enter into their deliberations, and that they let the good that must come to Woburn from having establishments of the nature of this one located among us weigh as heavily as prudence will allow on the side of a favorable decision.

SKIVINGS.

Circus days are almost here. Remember the May party to-night. The "pussy-willow" shows the white feather. Owing to the rise in paper, kites and newspapers are going up. To-morrow is dedicated to the memory of St. Philip and St. James. Mr. Kelley, agent for the Lowell Times, called at our office Saturday. The pay of the legislature of 1880, including mileage, amounts to $122,492. Another snow squall Saturday morning. Hope 'twas the last for this spring. English tapestry carpets at 85 cents per yard. See Chipman's advertisement. All the schools in town have a vacation of one week, commencing next Monday. Do not forget Cummings' second opening of summer styles of millinery, next week. The mathematician who wished to borrow some cash wrote: "I will 2 ask for a 1."

Venor announces his intention of retiring from the business of weather prophet.

Attention is called to J. W. Hammond's advertisement of gentlemen's clothing and furnishing goods.

Just received at the Railroad store 700 bushels seed oats, also a full assortment of grass and garden seeds.

W. W. Warren has sold his house and land on Pleasant street to Mrs. Sarah A. Woodside for $1200.

Landlord Hammond of the Central house, is putting a ten-foot addition on the north end of his dining-room.

The world, says an exchange, owes us all a living, but she is just as hard to collect from as any other debtor.

A large delegation from the First Congregational church attended the Woburn conference at Reading on Tuesday.

J. J. Cameron moves his harness shop to the rooms formerly occupied by E. K. Willoughby, on Walnut Street.

Mr. C. W. Oxford has rented his house at No. 100 Cambridge street, and removed to Cambridgeport.

May 12th Mr. W. A. Colegate will sell at his greenhouse 20,000 choice bedding and other plants. See his advertisement.

The Journal office has been made fragrant for two or three days by a bouquet of arbutus presented by a young lady friend.

The Catholic fair for the benefit of St. Charles church opens on Monday at Lyceum hall, and will continue three or four weeks.

We received a call Thursday from Mr. Edward Atkins of the firm of Atkins Brothers, publishers of the New Britain Herald.

In the list of special police appointed by the selectmen last week, the name of Edward Fountain should have appeared in place of Edward Thornton.

Many a hearty laugh was indulged in by the readers of the JOURNAL, when they read down to the reading of Mr. James Russell's essay in last week's paper.

The father who has a due regard for the happiness of his daughters will now examine the front gate and see that it is in proper condition for the summer campaign.

The Cemetery committee organized with P. L. Converse Esq. as chairman, and will hold their first meeting on Tuesday next.

The exercises at the next monthly meeting of the Y. M. C. A., Tuesday evening, will consist of papers on "The recent rebellion in the South—its causes, progress and result."

Ice will be furnished this season by Pickering & Co. and Morrill Brothers, at the rate of fifty cents per one hundred pounds. Last year they supplied family refrigerators for five dollars for the season.

Very good prices were received for some of Mr. Chapman and Thompson's pictures which were sold last week in Boston, though the prices obtained averaged low for all the paintings offered.

The exodus of people from the city and larger towns to the country and summer resorts, is like words of much larger than usual, and it is already difficult to secure comfortable quarters at the popular resorts.

Rev. Dr. Storrs, of N. Y., preached at the Unitarian church last Sunday morning, on the text "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him."

Saturday evening on Main street with a lady friend, and a number of the selectmen of his buggy broke and rather unceremoniously deposited them in the street. Neither was seriously hurt.

Mrs. Dr. John Clough and Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. W. Phinney have gone to spend a few weeks among the mountains of that region, which is such a delightful resort at this season of the year.

Mark Allen's dramatic company are to give an entertainment at Lyceum hall, May 1st, consisting of a new drama entitled "Our Bitter-Foe," and two comedies entitled "My Uncle's Will" and "None so deaf as those who won't hear."

The members of the Methodist church and other friends paid Mr. C. W. Oxford a farewell visit last evening, and attended a gold-headed cane and a carriage whip. Mr. Oxford goes to Cambridgeport. The Methodist church loses by his removal an active and valuable member.

We cannot refrain from very briefly expressing our appreciation of, and thanks for the many kind and useful things which we have been welcomed by the readers of the JOURNAL, both in Woburn and elsewhere. It is our ambition to make the paper worthy of whatever praise and good offices our friends so liberally bestow upon it.

Mr. John M. Bailey of "Winning Farm," Billerica, writes that his experiment of feeding stock on ensilage corn-fodder has proved entirely satisfactory, and invites any who may be interested in that system of preserving green forage crops for winter feed to visit his farm and witness the results of the first thorough trial of it in America.

A large party of neighbors and friends gathered at the house of Mr. and Mrs. S. Sawyer, Central Square, Tuesday evening, to celebrate the occasion of the 25th anniversary of their marriage. Among the numerous presents was a French pendulum clock, the gift of Samuel Cook and employees, purchased of G. W. Nichols, 169 Main street. A beautiful collection was served and the evening passed pleasantly.

At the house Mr. J. W. Hammond, on Tuesday evening, held an informal reception in honor of Rev. Wm. S. Barnes, recently pastor of the Unitarian church. Friends to the number of more than a hundred united in greeting their old pastor and friend, and a pleasant evening was spent. Mr. Barnes now occupies the important church of his faith in Montreal, Canada, and seems to be eminently happy in his new field of labor.

The time for planting strawberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries and blackberries is now at hand. They add so much to the attractions and associations of home life in the country, and are so easily and surely productive, that none should be without them. A pleasant evening was spent. Mr. Barnes now occupies the important church of his faith in Montreal, Canada, and seems to be eminently happy in his new field of labor.

The failure of the selectmen to reappoint Mr. A. A. Ferrin as one of the board of fire engineers deprives the department of the services of a most efficient and popular officer; one whose adaptability to the office of chief engineer, which he has held for two years, has been thoroughly tested and never yet found wanting. Nearly all the men in the fire department petitioned the selectmen to have Mr. Ferrin re-appointed, but for some reason they did not see fit to do so.

The "oldest Freemason" has got to dying again. Mr. J. P. Weston succeeds Mr. Carter as organist at the Unitarian church. The tuncful hand-organ furnishes abundant evidence that spring is with us. Mr. Albert Thompson goes to Europe next month to pursue his studies in painting. The fire department was called out Thursday evening, by the light from the Burlington fire. There is already talk of having the Ruggles street male quartet visit Woburn again. Hope they will. Now is the time for farmers to remember that "Whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap."

The last of Mr. Wm. F. Curtis' dancing schools for the season was held at Army hall, Wednesday evening.

If Woburn wants to become a city, a good way to attain that end is to encourage manufacturing concerns to locate here.

Gentlemen contemplating the purchase of land worth $2000 bonds will appear at the stock of J. C. Buck & Co., before buying.

It is suggested as a partial offset to the beer saloons that the street drinking fountains be put in operation, and a very good suggestion.

Mr. S. H. Patten wishes to remind the people of Woburn that he is prepared to furnish ice cream in quantities to suit purchasers, and of a quality not to be excelled.

John Crosby was before Justice Converse, charged with assault and battery, and fined ten dollars and costs. He appealed, and was put under $200 bonds to appear at the June term of the superior court for trial.

George Conn, son of Geo. H. Conn Esq., lost the ends of two of his toes Thursday morning, by getting his foot under a radiator which was being moved out of Buss' drug store.

The pressure of advertising and local affairs has forced us to omit considerable matter bearing upon local affairs from this week's paper, and it will be found on the first page of the next number of the JOURNAL.

Thirty-one members of company K, 30th Massachusetts Infantry, called on their old comrade Orin Sanborn, who lives at Central Square, Thursday evening. Mr. Sanborn's table was loaded with groceries brought by his brethren-in-arms, who also presented him a testimonial for framing.

The following from Lowell paper, will interest the friends and pupils of Mrs. Martha S. Hussey in Woburn:—We learn that Miss Martha S. Hussey has accepted an offer to deliver a course of lessons on elocution at a school at Northampton, which is preparatory to the highly endowed Smith college. Mrs. Hussey's admired tact and skill will render this engagement alike instructive to her pupils and creditable to her excellent reputation as a teacher of elocution.

Thursday evening a number of Woburn business men met at the bank to consider what might be done in regard to the proposition of the National Sewing Machine company, who are ready to remove their works to Woburn, if a certain amount of their stock can be raised.

Wednesday the town authorities of Burlington brought a crazy man who had threatened to burn the town hall, before the town meeting, and asked for a committee to make further investigations, and if thought advisable to solicit subscriptions to the stock.

commodious toilet rooms, entered through large doorways shut off by heavy draperies. The supervision of these extensive improvements has been intrusted to Mr. Theodore Weston, one of the directors of the company, and to him is due a great deal of credit not only for the energy, but the genuine taste which he has displayed, and the result of his labors is this elegant hall, which is being "a thing of beauty" and sure to be "a joy forever," must be of great practical benefit to the patrons of the company.

The Chinese in America. The lecture by Miss Mary F. Eastman upon "The Chinese Problem in America," at the Unitarian church Sunday evening, was well attended, and a good degree of interest manifested. Miss Eastman is a good lecturer, and clearly and forcibly presented her words from the first to the last of a somewhat long lecture. She is rather an enthusiastic champion of the almost-everything-for-the-Chinese cause, and many of her points are considered by so many Californians as positions on their preserve, but her words bore the impress of sincerity and truth. Miss Eastman has been to the golden state and personally made investigations and collected the data for her lecture, having spent some time in California, where she has seen the Chinese in their native land, and has been able to give them a sympathetic and just view.

Miss Eastman is a good lecturer, and clearly and forcibly presented her words from the first to the last of a somewhat long lecture. She is rather an enthusiastic champion of the almost-everything-for-the-Chinese cause, and many of her points are considered by so many Californians as positions on their preserve, but her words bore the impress of sincerity and truth. Miss Eastman has been to the golden state and personally made investigations and collected the data for her lecture, having spent some time in California, where she has seen the Chinese in their native land, and has been able to give them a sympathetic and just view.

"Well—day! That is remarkable! I will go this day and get some for my poor George—I know hops are good."

Special Notices.

At a special Parish Meeting, held in Trinity church, Woburn, April 23, 1880, the following was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the wise and judicious course pursued by our Rector, the Rev. J. Frank Winkley, in the discharge of his duties in this Parish, commend our unqualified respect. As a Christian gentleman, a pastor, and a friend, we honor him. By his fidelity to the principles of the church, patience and forbearance under circumstances of peculiar trial, he has, by the blessing of God, succeeded in confining us out of dangers and difficulties that threatened the life of the Parish, and we invoke God's blessing upon him and his family.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. The advantage of this compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use, but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime," but the fact that it is prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. Sold by A. B. Watson, Chemist, Boston, and all druggists.

Mortgagee's Sale.

BY virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain Mortgage Deed given by Charles Rose, of Wilmington, in the County of Middlesex, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to Alfred G. Carter, of Woburn, in said County, dated June 10, 1874, and recorded in Middlesex North District Registry of Deeds, Book 105, Page 24, and for breach of condition of said mortgage, will be sold at public auction, upon the premises hereinafter described, on Monday the seventeenth day of May, A. D., 1880, at 9 o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, viz:—A certain lot of land containing about eight acres, with the buildings thereon standing, situated in the southerly part of said Wilmington, on the road leading from Boston to Lowell, and bounded as follows, viz:—Beginning at the northerly corner of the premises, on said road, at land now or late of J. A. Ames; thence the line runs southerly on and by said road about seventy-five rods to a maple stump at land of Holton; thence westerly by land of said Holton, about two hundred and eighty-five feet to a stake at land of the Boston and Lowell Railroad Company; thence northerly by land of said Company, about seventy-two rods to a stake, at land now or late of J. A. Ames; thence northerly by land last named about sixteen rods to the point of beginning. Also all the right title and interest whether as fee or right of way which said Rose had or held in and to a certain strip of land used as a passway, on the day of the date of said mortgage deed, said strip being situated in said Wilmington, and said passway running from said road leading from Boston to Lowell to the road leading from Lowell to Salem opposite the lot above described. Said premises are the same conveyed to said Rose by said Shieley, by deed dated May 28, 1874.

"DU BIST WIE EINE BLUME."

Thou art even as a flower is,

I gaze on thee, and pure, and fair;

I feel as though I should lay, sweet,

My hands on thy head with a prayer,

That God may keep thee always, sweet

And gentle, and pure, and fair!

—Heine.

More May Magazines.

A delightfully delightful number is that of the May WIDE AWAKE, bright, breezy,

and full of spring feeling, with not a single dull

page or paragraph. It opens with a charming story by Sophie May, "The Twin Cousins," which Miss Humphrey illustrates with a full page drawing. Flaxie Frizzle, "Doctor Papa's" little girl, already known to a multitude of readers, is the heroine of the sketch, and everybody, old and young, will be glad to have this additional chapter of her adventures. B. P. Shillaber, dear old Mrs.

Partington, tells her a bear story, which would be very hard to believe if it came from any other source. For the girls

—the little girls—Mrs. Diaz has "A Leaf

from Annetta's Diary," and there is a story called "Jim's Troubles," in which boys and girls alike will be interested. The subject of Mr. Bonini's paper in the American Artist is Edwin L. Weeks, the well-known Boston painter. Miss Amanda B.

Harris contributes the initial paper of the series of four announced last month, with several illustrations from the pencil of G. F.

Barnes. The two serials, "Five Little Peppers" and "The Little Homesteaders," are continued, with increasing interest. There is an interesting biographical sketch of Rev.

Joseph Abbott, the author of the "Rolls books," with a portrait, and the fourth article of the "Concord Picnic Days" series.

The number is particularly rich in poetry.

"The Bedpost Doll," by Kate Lawrence,

will be read by the little ones with delight,

and so will "The Kitty Keeping House," and "Out in a Shower." One of the charming things of the number is Mary A. Lathbury's poem, "A Spring Snowstorm," with the accompanying illustration. The "Nursery

Tide" of the number is called "Fresh

Grass." It is the best of the series, thus far,

and will undoubtedly be in great demand as a pattern by the constantly increasing army of young decorators. The number is as fine as paper as any magazine in the country, and the text and illustrations are as clear and beautiful.

In the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for May,

ex-Judge Jere S. Black continues the very interesting series of papers on the third term

of modern Monarchism, begun in the February number. His article is entitled "Gen. Grant and

Woburn Journal.

IT WOULD NOT BE SO STRANGE if the Chicago convention should come to the conclusion that it could do better than ask the people to give the present administration another four years' lease of life.

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY TRIBUNE is a welcome visitor to our exchange list, and we regard it as a model for city weeklies. It is not a re-hash of the matter that has appeared in the daily edition. It is bright and readable without being vulgar or shallow, and is conducted with all the conscientious attention to the needs and the betterment of its readers that has always been a leading characteristic of the management of the Tribune.

IF ANY ONE, not particularly interested in the manufacture of boots and shoes or kindred branches, is in the habit of tossing the Shoe and Leather Reporter to one side as a journal they would not be likely to be interested in they make a mistake, for inside its covers is much that is of interest to the general reader. The pages devoted to editorial use contain every week much that is good and strong and eminently sensible. We know of no trade journal that is conducted abler, homelier, or with better results.

SPECULATIONS AND CONJECTURES as to who will be the nominee of the Chicago convention are of but little value. The adherents of "bureaus" of each would-be candidate busy themselves in circulating reports of the hopeful signs they think they see in the political sky; but they are none of them prophets whose utterances can be taken for gospel truths, and the shrewd observer of events maintains a discreet silence, saying to himself: "Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, while thousands of great cattle chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make a noise are the only inhabitants of the field."

OLD ENGLAND still sets a worthy example to her forward and precocious daughter this side the water in some things. A late number of the Athenaeum says that a society has lately been organized for the regulation of street music, and the suppression of street musicians. It not only wages war against organs of all kinds, but also, to quote its own synopsis of the bill which it proposes to bring before parliament during the present session, wishes to make it illegal "for any vendor of food or other commodity, any hawkers of newspapers or other periodicals, or any other persons, to call, hawl, or cry his or her wares, merchandise, or occupation, or otherwise to attempt to attract attention by making discordant noises, whether by the human voice or by blowing horns or ringing bells." Who that has had almost murderous thoughts come into his mind, as he heard the interminable grind of a hand organ beneath his window, the Indian yell of a "swe-e-e toringee, swe-e-e toringee; or fifteen tea quarters adollar!" or the hideous and unnecessary noises that make the day hideous to those living on or near the principal streets of any of the larger towns, but will cordially endorse the motives of this society, and wish for a similar law here.

MR. J. S. LAURIE, lately one of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools, writes a sensible letter to the London Times upon the subject of the forcing system of education which is as applicable to America as to England. He says: "The evidence of physicians in regard to the harmful effects of overstraining the natural faculties is of the utmost value. But even the aggregate of cases of ill health and nervous prostration, and the medium of the prevailing and too rapidly increasing physical effects of excessive study are infinitely worse than those from intemperance, eating or drinking, and the danger is further aggravated by the fact that the subtle and varying phisic of brain disease or mental prostration are not yet capable of an accurate diagnosis. Hence, 'rest and change' form the burden of a sensible physician's advice. Meanwhile, the practical question is, 'Why should such a state of things exist at all, especially in so far as mere boys and girls are concerned?' I have just seen a youth at home for his holidays from one of our public schools, and although only fourteen years of age, his recreation consisted in 'coaching up' in Greek and Latin composition, the Odes of Horace, the Anabasis, and a play of Euripides. As regards the choice of range of subjects, our better-class schools for girls are more on a level with the age; but the system of high-pressure is here equally conspicuous. The poor girls pass the days and nights in a constant fever of excitement in order to acquire high 'marks,' or to take a creditable stand in this or that examination. Unquestionably, an examination by an inspector or a body corporate foreigner, and the system of high-pressure is here equally conspicuous. POLICE COURT.

F. L. CONVERSE, TRIAL JUSTICE.

May 1.—Dennis Walsh was up for being a common drunkard, and sent to the house of correction for three months.

May 3.—Elizabeth McCollough, a dashing dandy from Lowell, imbibed too much and was found on the street in a condition not wholly consistent with maidenly modesty. She told a pitiable story and promised sweeter things, but the Judge thought the commonwealth entitled to $3 and costs, which Lizzie had to pay. She therefore spends thirty days at the house of correction.

May 4.—John Garrity indulged himself in a spree, for which Judge Converse thought he could afford to open an account with the state with $3 and costs in favor of the latter.

May 5.—John Bradley for being drunk and noisy, was fined $3 and costs. John Nason got into an argument with Mr. Charles Spear, keeper of the almshouse, and indulged in such knock-down arguments that the court adjudged him guilty of assault and battery and fined him $25 and costs, amounting to $31.65, which he finally paid. It seems Nason had been working at the town farm, and the difficulty between him and Mr. Spear arose from the fact that the latter gentleman refused to allow the town to be galled out of a week's wages, for time Nason lost. Mr. Spear refused to be a party to so barefaced a scheme to cheat the town, and Nason therefore knocked him down and struck and kicked him several times afterward.

May 6.—Rosabel Kelley tripped into court under a charge of being stubborn and willful, and the court gave her a ticket of admission to the state industrial school for the remainder of her minority. Rosy is only fifteen years old, and if her own story of her exploits with a bad young man is true, she will need the whole of the six years of her stay at Lancaster in which to thoroughly reform.

MEETINGS FOR NEXT WEEK.

BAPTIST.—Preaching on Sunday at the usual hour by Rev. H. M. Dean of Hingham. Sunday school at 12 m.; young people's meeting at 6 p. m.; praise meeting at 7. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 7.30. Pastor's Bible class Friday evening.

EPISCOPAL.—Preaching Sunday by the pastor at the usual hour. Topic for the morning sermon, "The life was manifested;" for the afternoon sermon, "The ascension of Christ."

UNITARIAN.—Preaching on Sunday at 10.30 a. m. and 7 p. m. by Rev. G. W. Briggs, D. D., of Cambridgeport. Sunday school at 12 m.

CATHOLIC.—Services at St. Charles church, Main street, at the usual hours on Sunday.

METHODIST.—Preaching at 10.30 a. m. and 2.30 p. m.; Sunday school at 12 m.; prayer meeting at 7 p. m.

CONGREGATIONAL.—Preaching at the church Rev. John O. Means, D. D., of Boston, on Sunday, at 10.30 a. m.; Sunday school and Bible class at 12 m.; young people's prayer meeting at 6 p. m.; conference meeting at 7 p. m. Conference meeting on Wednesday evening at 7.30. Ladies' Social Benevolent Thursday afternoon and evening.

Y. M. C. A.—Discussion at their rooms Tuesday evening on "The second coming of Christ." Meeting at Cedar street school-house Thursday evening. The quarterly conference of the Y. M. C. A. eastern division of Mass. meets in Woburn the first week in June.

BURLINGTON BUDGET.

BY M. H. NICHOLS.

SOCIAL.—The torchlight festival held by the young folks at Town Hall last Friday evening, was the event of the season. The evening was very enjoyable, owing to the cool atmosphere. Parties were present from all the surrounding towns.

NEW CHURCH.—Next Sunday, we are informed, a choir will be prepared to furnish music at the church.

CENSUS.—Mr. C. G. Foster is busy taking the school census.

ASSESSORS.—Messrs. Sewall, Nichols and Pollock are busy noting down the personal property, and Monday we understand the full board commence their task of taking the valuation of real estate.

ROBBERY.—Mr. James H. Walker had about $68 stolen from a bureau drawer in his house one day last week. The case is in the hands of the proper authorities.

THEFT.—A short time since about thirteen dollars in silver was pilfered from the post office desk, in the store of Silas Cutler.

CONCERT.—The concert at the church next Sunday evening, will be an interesting one. Subject: Prayer.

WILMINGTON.

The dramatic club closed the season last Saturday with the presentation of George M. Baker's masterpiece, "Better than Gold," and concluded with the farce "Don't Judge by Appearances." All the various parts were rendered in a first class style and Simond's orchestra did effective service. At the conclusion of the drama Mr. Joseph N. Ames presented the manager, Mr. H. A. Mason with a beautiful armchair, contributed by the members of the club, reciting in a very appropriate address the many efforts of the manager in sustaining the club, and working for its success. Another attraction of the evening was the appearance of the violinist, Master Bonnie Widger of Lynn. Master Widger is but 10 years old and handles the bow equal to a practised virtuoso. If he continues improving in accordance with his present acquisitions we may expect Lynn to develop a second Ole Bull.

The selectmen have begun taking account of the personal property in town.

Our town was represented at the 7th congressional district convention at Lowell by Mr. Edward A. Carter, substitute for Jonathan Carter, and Dr. Henry Hiller. Both voted for the successful candidates, George A. Marden of Lowell, and George S. Boutwell of Groton.

A Loosing Joke.

A prominent physician of Pittsburg said jokingly to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, and his inability to cure her, "try Hop Bitters!" The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters, from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughs at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.

Added to the principal attractions of former seasons.

Among the most notable may be named

"ZAZEL"

The late sensation of London, Paris, and New York, in her terrific Aerial Dive, or Eagle Swoop, creating a furore at every performance. The audience is held spell-bound as she leaps into space headfirst from the highest point of the Pavilion, plunging through the air nearly one hundred feet, which is only equaled by the startling COUT DE CANNON, in which she is shot from the mouth of an Eighty-Ton Gun, and projected over sixty feet.

A GROUP OF NATIVE ZULUS

In their national songs, dances, and festivities.

Seven New Trick Stallions

Added to the famous group of twenty imported Royal Stallions, all appearing in new scenes, tricks, and evolutions, under the direction of MONSIEUR DOCKRILL.

A Househunting Experience.

Mrs. Joshua Maclean was a very busy woman. "Watts's honey-bee isn't a circumstance to her," Joshua Maclean would say, with a smile. It was not a smile of derision, but very satisfied, for he was a busy man, and this element of activity in his partner was a source of intense satisfaction. "Just suppose a drone had fallen to my share in the lottery of marriage!" he would say, with a shrug of his shoulders. "I would have pulled her arms off, figuratively, trying to urge her forward, and she might have pulled me back. That's the way incompatibilities come. Now Bess and I pull together pretty well. Sometimes, it's true, she gets a little beyond me, but a little tightening of the rein and a gentle 'whoa' brings her alongside without any more trouble."

As a result of Mrs. Maclean's activity, she had a great deal to do, for society learned long ago that, as a rule, if it wanted anything done, it was safest to go to a busy person to get it done. Drones never learn executive duty.

Now Bess and I pull together pretty well. Sometimes, it's true, she gets a little beyond me, but a little tightening of the rein and a gentle 'whoa' brings her alongside without any more trouble."

To such busy people there comes her day when executive ability is taxed to the utmost. The varied duties do not spread themselves neatly over a given space, but come like "troubles, in battalions."

One of these days, and one of these hours in the day, had come to Mrs. Joshua Maclean. She was sewing, watching her children and entertaining a neighbor, when the tide set in. A note came, begging her, president of a relief association, to examine the credentials of a suffering applicant immediately. Another came, begging her to visit a family in extreme destitution at once. A servant entered, saying that the seamstress could not proceed further without orders, and directly behind the servant came Harry Maclean with a note from his teacher stating that he was sent home because he complained of more and was feverish. With a mother's instinct, the minor duties waited, while Mrs. Maclean examined the child's throat. She was thus engaged when her husband's brother entered with a telegram.

"It's from Joshua," he explained. "He says there's a house for sale up town that he wants you to look at immediately. 'Drop everything,' he telegraphs, and look after it."

Mrs. Joshua Maclean knitted her brow, and the neighbor smiled, but she said kindly, "If there is any way I can assist you, I hope you will allow me."

"I shall be dropping everything, I don't see how anything can be dropped," said Mrs. Maclean meditatively. She took a medicine case, and as she prepared some medicine for her sick child, said to the waiting servant, "Tell the seamstress to wait on the sheets in the closet until I am at liberty. I keep such plain work for emergencies," she explained to her neighbor. "Now I must put Harry in a room by himself until I know whether he is ill from contagion, and I can't leave him. I will attend to the case down stairs as soon as Harry is comfortable."

"Can I visit the poor family?" volunteered the neighbor. "I shall be very grateful," replied Mrs. Maclean. Then she turned to her brother-in-law.

"Hal, I can't look after the house. It would be a great favor if you could do it."

"But I began my brother-in-law."

Mrs. Maclean interrupted him. "You know our needs and tastes too, almost as well as we do ourselves. You know we want a house similar to this, only larger. Observe the paper, the paint and the walls. Be sure to get the best of the house-hunting may be of service to you in the future," suggested the neighbor, pleasantly.

"Bachelor halls are very dreary places, in my way of thinking," replied Henry Maclean, gravely. "A home that is a home needs a wife."

"Precisely," said the neighbor. "Wife and home were in my thoughts when I suggested the acquisition of knowledge for future use."

Henry Maclean shrugged his shoulders, and gave his head a negative shake. "You would not advise a man who had civil engineering before him to learn to be a jeweller, I suppose?"

"No; but I would advise a man who had civil engineering or anything else before him not to cast away a jewel if he should stumble across one. Diamonds always repay for the test, if they are not the same as the chemist's—a crystallized silicate, and not pure carbon."

As he passed out, the neighbor said, with a point, "Your brother-in-law is incorrigible. It is that good old Scotch proverb, 'A man who has a wife and a home, he makes his such a good wife, and I know she works the ground he walks on. Is there any old lady that fills his mind and heart to the exclusion of all the interesting ladies of our set?'"

"We never knew of any love affair," replied Mrs. Maclean, in a confidential tone, "but I have my suspicions. He was a young man at the time of our civil war, and as a colonel, did good service in the Union army. Attached to his sword in a cur of light flaxen hair tied with a blue ribbon. I once begged him to tell me the story of the golden lock, but he answered, quietly, that there was nothing to tell."

"It looks like a child's," I ventured to suggest. "To which he replied: 'The head on which it grew must have known as many summers and winters as your own.'"

"I hope she is not dead," I ventured again. "And he answered in the same quiet way, 'I never heard of her death.'"

"Is she married?" I asked, bluntly. "I presume so; I don't know," he answered, a trifle less calmly. "The ribbon is faded; I will bring you a fresh piece, and put this in the rag-bag," I suggested.

"But he shook his head decidedly. 'A new piece would not be the same,' he answered, gravely. "This is a slight foundation on which to build a romance, but I have often heard the faded ribbon and sunny hair. Hal, with all his bravery, is a shy man. He would be like Miles Standish, whom he is always quoting, in love and in war. I don't believe he ever heard 'that terrible No. 1' from the lips of the woman 'who had sunny hair and wore pale blue ribbons, but I can fancy him looking at her, and letting some other man win her. You see he would only have himself to blame, and would go on remembering the past dream with a dreary kind of pleasure. Still, I always expect to see him married. Home and wife are the just deserts of men like Hal."

The man of whom this cheerful prophecy was made was on his way to an up-town residence, in no enviable frame of mind. "It's absurd of Joshua's wife to send me on this errand," he was thinking. "I am sure to blunder. Let me see—paint, paper, walls, floor and sewer gas—were the items of special importance."

"What a pleasant-looking house!" he thought, as he ascended the steps of the residence designated in his brother's telegram. In the hall, he carefully noted the wall from floor to ceiling, looked closely at the paint, and made an inventory of the closets at the back of the hall. Then he was admitted into the parlor, and saw at a glance that the arrangement was such as Mrs. Maclean desired. A faint perfume of violets was a pleasant odor to inhale when he feared to encounter sewer gas. He glanced at the wall and then his eye fell on a lady who advanced from the rear room and exclaimed, "Mr. Maclean!"

"My old friend Ruby!" he exclaimed, as he took her hand. "This is an unexpected pleasure."

He glanced at the wall and then his eye fell on a lady who advanced from the rear room and exclaimed, "Mr. Maclean!"

"My old friend Ruby!" he exclaimed, as he took her hand. "This is an unexpected pleasure."

"Very pleasant," she replied, as she looked at him. "I was genuine pleasure on both sides, if sparkling eyes and glowing cheeks were signs of pleasure; then each surveyed the other with glances half questioning and half apprehensive, as they exchanged ordinary remarks and Henry Maclean explained his errand."

"My sister occupies the house, and will show it to you presently," said the lady. "Do you want it furnished as you find it?"

Henry Maclean looked at the fair woman—sunny hair waving over her forehead, clear blue eyes looking searchingly into his at one moment, and glancing shyly away the next; lips moving nervously, as if she were mastering some emotion; and he replied, emphatically, "Just as it is."

"There is a pleasant view from the back windows," said the lady, leading the way to the rear room.

"Yes, indeed," replied Henry Maclean; but he had given only a glance outside, and was gazing down on the fair-haired woman, standing a little lower than himself. Then he felt to asking questions about her family and friends; and all the time he had the air of a lawyer who is asking indirect questions hoping to elicit some unknown facts.

"Mamma!" called a childish voice in the hall. The fair lady stepped to the door and said gently, "Go to the nursery, Hal."

Henry Maclean started at the sound of the name he always bore in his own home. Had he been given to his sweet remembrance of his mother? The thought that this remembrance must count for naught if there were husband and children, had in it the sadness of "it might have been."

"The years must have brought many changes to you," said Henry Maclean, with a view of gaining some personal knowledge.

"Yes," answered the lady, with a meditative look on her face. "There are few reminders even of the old days left. I have had my share of joy and sorrow."

Henry Maclean noted, what he had not seen before, that there was a mingling of crease in the lady's black dress. "Perhaps she is a widow," was his thought.

"My mother's death last year was the greatest affliction I have ever had," she said, sadly.

"Not a widow?" was Henry Maclean's mental comment. "The loss of her husband would have been a greater affliction to this woman than the death of her mother."

"There was a pause, and Henry Maclean said: 'You must know Mrs. Maclean. She will give you a friend of mine a warm welcome.'"

"Certainly," replied the lady. "It will be a pleasure to know her. Ah, here is my sister, Mrs. Ellis. Sue, don't you remember Mr. Maclean?"

"Remember him? What, Hal, our most devoted attendant and dearest friend? Upon my word, I hadn't a dearer friend than this," exclaimed the sister in a voluble way he remembered well. "How glad I am to see you! The servant told me a gentleman was waiting to see you. I thought you were dreaming of finding an old friend in the house hunter. Are you a judge of houses?" she asked, in a practical way.

"I fear not; but Mrs. Maclean was unable to come as one of the children was ill," replied Henry Maclean.

"How many children are there?" asked Mrs. Ellis.

"Five," answered Henry Maclean.

Mrs. Ellis proceeded immediately to the business in hand. "I will show you the upper stories if you like to look."

As they left the parlor, a child entered from the rear, exclaiming, "Mamma!"

Henry Maclean followed his leader, looking back at the tableau of the sweet woman's face, against which the child's curly head rested. It was a pretty picture; but it gave him pain, for the child's head seemed to suggest that possibility of sweet remembrance and vain regret.

Mrs. Ellis enumerated the good points of the house with the volubility of a house agent, and Henry Maclean appeared to follow, but his thoughts were with the fair woman in the parlor below.

"It is strange we never met until to-day," he said, somewhat irrelevantly, as Mrs. Ellis's last remark was about communicating rooms.

"You see we went to Europe when you went for a soldier," replied Mrs. Ellis. "I was there until the war was over. Remained some years longer. When we came back to Baltimore, your family had moved to New York, and we lost sight of you all. It was very dismal coming back to strangers and many changes. I soon found comfort in my engagement to Mr. Ellis, and Ruby went back to Europe. She wants to go again, but we are trying to keep her here."

"Is her husband there?" asked Henry Maclean.

him forever. To find her unclaimed and untrammelled he had hardly dared to hope. He was soon in the parlor, and by Ruby's side.

"Tell Mrs. Maclean we would like her decision as soon as possible," said Mrs. Ellis, somewhat sharply. "To herself she was saying, 'The man might have married Ruby once, but he shall not flit with her now.'"

"I am glad to find Ruby unchanged," said Henry Maclean in response.

Mrs. Ellis replied, brusquely: "She is wonderfully changed to me. The years have brought great strength and goodness to Ruby. She is not a woman to tolerate nonsense of any kind."

She justified her brusque speech with the mental comment: "A man with a wife and five children has no business to stand there with undisguised admiration on his face, and congratulate himself on finding Ruby unchanged. It's a trying ordeal for her, and I would shorten it if I could."

Her remark brought the color to Ruby's face, and Henry Maclean looked annoyed. "I don't understand"—he began.

Mrs. Ellis interrupted him. "You will bring Mrs. Maclean when you come again?"

"Possibly her husband will be free to come with her," was the quiet response.

"Husband! Are you not Mrs. Maclean's husband?" asked Mrs. Ellis, wondering.

"Me? Oh no; my brother Joshua is Mrs. Maclean's husband," replied Henry Maclean with a smile.

"And father of the five children?" continued Mrs. Ellis.

"Father of the five children," echoed Henry Maclean.

"And haven't you any wife?" asked Mrs. Ellis, curiously.

"The Bible says, 'A good wife is from the Lord,' said Henry Maclean, gravely. "He has never given me such a blessing."

Mrs. Ellis's eyes twinkled.

"I could give you a Bible quotation that might help you," she said, demurely; but a warning glance from Ruby stopped her just as a visitor was announced.

"You will come to see us soon?" said Mrs. Ellis, as Henry Maclean arose to leave.

"Can I come this evening?" he asked.

"Certainly," replied Mrs. Ellis. "It is well to get a gas-light view of things you are interested in buying."

When the door shut, Mrs. Ellis turned to Ruby, apparently much interested in the visitor's card. "Do you know what I was about to quote? 'Ask, and it shall be given you.'"

"Oh, Sue!" exclaimed the shrinking woman. "Don't toss me to any man, as if I were a ball to be picked up or let alone, as suits his pleasure."

At the dinner-table Mrs. Maclean turned eagerly to her brother-in-law with the question, "How do you like house-hunting?"

"Immense," answered the hearty response. "I think I never enjoyed anything so much in my life."

Mrs. Maclean looked searchingly at the man. It sounded like sarcasm, but there was genuine pleasure in the face she scrutinized.

"It must have been a satisfactory house," she said, complacently. "Now tell me all about it."

"It is a pleasant looking house; brownstone front, high stoop, and three rooms deep," answered Henry Maclean, glibly.

Mrs. Maclean looked gratified. "What was the condition of the paper and paint?" she asked.

"The hall paper was dark, and the wood-work dark and in good order," replied Henry Maclean, positively.

"Well, the rest of the house?" pursued Mrs. Maclean.

"She wasn't an Ellis when I knew her," replied Henry Maclean. "She was Sue Monroe."

"I did not see the sister," added Mrs. Maclean. "She had gone for a walk. I will decide about the house to-night."

The next morning at the breakfast table came a note to Joshua Maclean from the house agent, saying that Mrs. Ellis had withdrawn the house from the market.

"How provoking!" exclaimed Mrs. Maclean. "We had decided to take it. Just think, brother Hal," she said, as her brother-in-law entered the breakfast room, "that lovely house which you and I fell in love with has been withdrawn from the market."

"Ah," he said, in an interested way,—"any reason given?"

"Not a word," answered Mrs. Maclean. "I think folks ought to know their own minds better than to put a house in the market one day and withdraw it the next."

"Perhaps there has been a change of base," suggested Henry Maclean.

"You were going to look at it by gas-light," said Mrs. Maclean. "How did it impress you?"

"Very pleasantly," was the smiling reply.

"Brother Hal," said Mrs. Maclean, bending over her seat, "of course you went to look at more than the house by gas-light. Do you know why this house is withdrawn from the market?"

"The lady has concluded to occupy it," replied Henry Maclean.

"Does not the house belong to Mr. Ellis?" was the next query.

"No," he replied. "It belonged to the Monroe estate, and fell to the sister's share."

"Hal," said Mrs. Maclean, gravely, "our neighbor yesterday suggested Miss Anderson as a desirable alliance for you."

"Tell our neighbor I am like the house—withdrawn from the market," was the smiling answer.

"Just tell me this, Hal," said Mrs. Maclean, in a coaxing way; "did the fair-haired woman you met when you went house-hunting ever wear a poor blue current and a pale blue ribbon? You see I am putting two and two together."

"Your figures are units of the same denomination, and you can add them," was the frank reply. "The stray lock belongs to that fair head."

"And it all came about from my sending you to look after a house," mused Mrs. Maclean.

"Yes. The results we unconsciously attain often exceed in greatness the intent we consciously pursue," was the philosophic remark.

"Seeking for a house for you in no enviable frame of mind, I have found a wife for myself and my frame of mind is—"

"The pause and turned to his brother, "Joshua, perhaps you can get it if you go back to the day when you fell in love with Bess, and add fifteen years of separation and loneliness to it, and the result will be that you have belonged to each other all through the past, and mutually vow to belong to each other all through the future. It makes a very neat sum of happiness, Joshua," said he, with a radiant smile.

Narrow-Minded Money Spending.

It is when the money to be spent involves greater interests than a bijou or a picture, a book or a vase, a man, an object of virtue or an object of vice, that the narrowest and edgiest of us all, the most ungenerous, selfish and growl over costs into play and makes of an amiable, interesting, unselfish man or woman a curmudgeon who unravels at the great of little present expense, while he swallows the canal of an immense future outlay of health and hope and happiness. There is in the bank or the pocket the little nest egg which is some one's only resource, and the gorgeous bird of Paradise, which will swallow itself, our house, or our friends. There is meanwhile in brain, and bone, and muscle the languid inertia of an overworked organism, the qualms and vapors and sick devils of a poor blood current, and a bad digestion, the weak hand and troubled spirit that accompany nervous irritability. A few months, a few weeks, sometimes a few days, spent in utter relaxation, a breathing spell, a change of scene, a change of air, a change of routine which is wearing out body and soul, a whiff of fresh mountain air, or a dreamy rest in some sun-bathed valley, would oil the jarred mechanism and set the sweet bells jangling to the old time chiming of peace and content. "Is it possible to conceive a near-sightedness which, rather than spend the little hard laid by for some pet project, will struggle with this dragging weight of ill conduct, and the gloom which the remedy is past being bought and life itself pays the forfeit of procrastination. What idea of value is this which places the possession of this little glittering hoard above peace, above content, above sweet sleep at night and the calm poise of a healthy mind in a healthy body."

Sergeant Waterbury of the 3d North Carolina made his escape from the prison at City Point, and was seen while trying to make his way through the pickets on the night of the 14th of December. He represented himself as belonging to a company of Pennsylvania Cavalry on picket in front of the infantry. As he was dressed in a cavalry uniform and was provided with a forged pass agreeing with his story, he was not regarded with much suspicion. Noble was sent with him beyond the infantry to the first cavalry post for identification, and not being sufficiently on his guard against a supposed friend, was easily overpowered by a clever ruse, and found himself at the mercy of the scout. Retaining Noble at his prisoner, the scout, after spending a day in the attempt, succeeded in getting through the cavalry videttes; but Noble who had been patiently watching for an opportunity, sprung upon his captor in an unguarded moment,

and regaining his gun inflicted a mortal wound upon the rebel and afterwards carried him more than half a mile to a point within our lines. Waterbury was one of the most useful scouts in the rebel service and was an athletic man. Noble is a slightly-built lad of nineteen, and he has received a furlough for thirty-five days from General Meade as a reward for his gallant conduct.

Miss Flynn and her Lover.

Miss Mary Flynn was studying medicine and being courted at the same time. Mr.
William Budd was attending to the latter business. One evening while they were sitting together in the front parlor, Mr. Budd was thinking how he should manage to propose. Miss Flynn was explaining certain physiological facts to him.

"Do you know," she said, "that thousands of persons are actually ignorant that they smell with their olfactory peduncle?"
"Millions of 'em," replied Mr. Budd.

"And Aunt Mary wouldn't believe me when I told her that she couldn't wink without a sphincter muscle?"
"How unreasonable!"

"Why, a person cannot even kiss without it!"
"Indeed!"

"I know it is so!"
"Oh, Mr. Budd, it is too bad for you to make light of such a subject!"

Mr. Budd seized her hand and kissed it.
She permitted it to remain in his grasp.
"I didn't notice," he said, "whether a—a—what do you call it—a sphincter helped them?"

"Let me try it again," he said, and he then he tried again, and while he held her hand she explained to him about the muscles of that portion of the human body.

"It is remarkable how much you know about such things," said Mr. Budd—really wonderful. Now, for example, what is the bone at the back of the head called?"

"Why, the occipital bone, of course."
"And what are the names of the muscles of the arm?"

"The spiralis and the infra-spiralis, among others."
"Well, now let me show you what I mean. When I put my infra-spiralis around your waist, so, is it your occipital bone that rests upon my shoulder-blade, in this way?"

"My back hair primarily, but the occipital bone of course, afterwards. But oh, Mr. Budd, suppose you should come in and see us?"

"Let him come! Who cares?" said Mr.
Budd, boldly. "I think I'll exercise a sphincter again and take a kiss."

"Mr. Budd, how can you?" said Miss Flynn, after he had performed the feat.
"Don't call me Mr. Budd," called Mr. Willie," he said, drawing her closer. "You accept me, don't you? I know you do, darling."

"Willie," whispered Miss Flynn, faintly,
"I can hear your heart beat."
"It beats only for you, my angel."

"And it sounds to me out of order. The ventricular contraction is not uniform."
"I will wonder for that when it's bursting for joy."

"You must put yourself under treatment for it. I will give you some medicine."
"It's your own property, darling; do what you please with it. But somehow the sphincter operation is the one that strikes me most favorably. Let me see how it works again?"

"But why proceed? The old, old story was told again, and the old, old performance of the muscles of Mr. Budd's mouth enacted again.—Hax Adler.

Historical.

May 14, nineteen years ago today, Ross Winans was arrested, Gen. Butler was seizing arms in Baltimore, Fremont and McLe-land were appointed Major Generals in the regular army. May 14, 1862, steamer Alice having on board the church bells of Plymouth, N. C., which she was taking up the

There was a terrible inundation in Bosnia,
May 13 and 14, 1877, and the battle of Crown Point, whose ruined fortress marks
the site of many a struggle was fought May

ed to the Green Mountain Boys. ***

Mrs. Goodington has been shopping.
"The clerks," she says, "treated me with the outermost condensation's long's they could get anything out of me, but no sooner had one of 'em found out that I was a caliker and a hank o' yarn was all I wanted, then he began screaming out 'Cash! I for-he'd half done 'em up. I just told him if I didn't have a tall two yards long a-dangle-
ing to him in the shop, for no sooner did I take take my puss out of 'my rillike, then he steps a real dirty little boy, nigger'n our Steve, and takes the money right out of the hand of that sarse box."—Boston Trans-

An ancient and proud-spirited son of the Old Dominion was called upon to respond to a toast complimentary to his native state.
"I am proud," said he, "to reply to a toast to Virginia, the mother, as she is of her statesmen and states!" Whereupon another native of Virginia, who had migrated to Texas, but happened to be present on the occasion, exclaimed: "Yes, by ginger, but she stopped breeding long ago!"

It is estimated that there are three million unmarried men and four million unmarried women in the country. It will be seen that if all the men should marry there would be a surplus of a million old maids from which to draw for second wives. This is a great country for man.

A Michigan journal says: "In this state etiquette permits a bride to be married without gloves, because that's the way she handles the groom after marriage."

A WORD

IN REGARD TO JOB PRINTING.

We would inform the people of Woburn and vicinity that we have thoroughly overhauled and renovated the stock of printing material in the office of the WOBURN JOUR-NAL. Old type has been removed and old machinery discarded to give place to a large assortment of new and stylish type, a new job press, etc. Within the past week we have added one thousand dollars worth of new material to the already large stock, giving us facilities for turning out work in every particular equal to any city office, and at a less price. We do not intend to be beaten in quality of work, reasonableness of charge, or in promptness in filling all orders entrusted to us. We are prepared to furnish estimates for any kind of work, from the smallest label to the largest poster, and from the cheapest circular to the most elegant engraved wedding cards and invitations.
We have also made arrangements with a

Woburn Journal.

FRIDAY, MAY 21, 1880.

It looks now as though there was going to be a bit of difficulty between Uncle Sam and John Bull in consequence of early in 1878. The English government has plainly broken faith with us and disregarded the conditions of its solemn treaty. It remains to be seen in what way the Washington authorities will resist it.

Now it is said that "George Eliot" is not married at all, but that the person who was married was the widow of one George H. Lewes. The mistake was all the fault of the staid, matter-of-fact and eminently correct English newspapers, who reported the marriage of "George Eliot," because of the similarity of the name, in truly Yankee guess fashion.

That was a suggestive array of names of convicts who were summoned before the governor and council at the state prison investigation last week. Col. Sibley, Charles S. Whittier, Deacon Andrews, L. W. Pond, S. Angier Chase, Abraham Jackson and James F. Edmonds. There are a few outside the Concord institution who might well have been there, and who will probably find their way into the circle before long.

Elsewhere we from month to month publish notices of the Popular Science Monthly, but we were here to say a word in favor of parents and teachers, who have young minds under their tuition, giving this magazine a prominent place among the list of literature they recommend the young to read. In our opinion, no publication of the day can be read with as much profit as this. It adds solid knowledge to those who consult its pages, and not in the dry-as-dust way most scientific works do. It is most aptly named, and every number contains articles people cannot afford not to read and know about.

Governor Long and the executive council have been petitioned to appoint "one of the many women of which the state is justly proud" on the board of health, lunacy and charity to fill one of the vacancies that occur this year. The petition bears the names of Massachusetts' most honored citizens, such as F. O. Prince, mayor of Boston; F. T. Greenhalgh, mayor of Lowell; ex-Govs. Boutwell, Rice, Gaston and Banks; Hon. S. T. Tobey, Hon. W. H. Paine, Oliver Ames, Henry I. Bowditch, M. D., of the national board of health; D. Humphreys Storer, M. D., A. Cabot, M. D., Hon. T. C. Appleton, Nathan Appleton, Rev. E. E. Hale, Rev. Phillips Brooks, Rev. J. F. Ware, Rev. W. Longfellow, Franklin Haven, George M. Barnard, A. W. Beard, J. Ingersoll Bowditch, Charles W. Slack, Charles S. Lilley of Lowell, and many others.

ONLY A WEEK FROM NEXT Tuesday. The interested ones almost hold their breaths in the intensity of their waiting eagerness. And who is not interested? Who is there so in-laid in the armor of indifference who has not gradually laid aside his don't-care manner and commenced to look with ever-growing interest at the political column of his daily paper? And every one can find comfort there. The variety of opinions and prophecies is so great that every man can select that which assimilates with his ideas and convictions and extract his needed comfort from them. They are his truth, and other opinions carry on their face the evidence of their falsity. The struggle for the candidature has been so long and so intense that the appearance upon the scene of some man whose name had not been "mentioned" by the humblest leader of public opinion would be a positive relief. Whom the republicans will nominate is as yet as great a mystery as is the object of the building of the Egyptian pyramids. One thing only is evident: to save their party from utter ruin and almost certain defeat at the polls they must nominate a man who will not alienate any of its purest adherents, but who may be voted for by disgruntled democrats. If they do not do that, and the democrats do it, then the latter will stand the better show for electing the next president. The dividing line between the parties is very dim and will be easily crossed by men who prefer to see a good man at the head of the government rather than the triumph of either party.

THE BOSTON HERALD has unearthed its prominent "gentleman" again, this time to illumine the affairs of the republican party in this congressional district. We fancy people hereabouts will be considerably astonished to learn from this source for the first time that Mr. Bowman owes his nomination to the petty jealousy and desire for revenge upon Mr. Cummings held by a wife of one delegate to the convention from Woburn. The Herald correspondent sees no virtue in Mr. Bowman's congressional career, and predicts that he will have no chance of a re-nomination. How that may be we do not know, but the feeling against our representative in congress is greatly exaggerated. Mr. Bowman has certainly not made for himself a brilliant record, but that he has not conscientiously and faithfully performed his duty has not been shown. It was not to be expected that he or any new man could at once and worthily fill the place of General Banks, who beside being a man of exceptionally brilliant talents had had a long experience in public affairs. It is not claimed that Bowman has been a brilliant, or it may be even a passable, record at Washington; but he certainly is very many removes from the incompetent blank the Herald would have us believe. It is probably true that he stands no chance of a re-nomination, but it should be remembered in that connection that he was taken up at first not because of his eminent fitness for the position but because he answered the requirements of the delegates to the nominating convention who would not vote for either Banks or Cummings. He was a negative man, and his was the neutral platform upon which the two opposing factions met and clasped hands. His record in congress may not be one that people will proud to refer to, but it is surely as worthy as was the motives of the men who sent him there. He has done his best in a position thrust upon him by men who would accept neither of two better alternatives. The Herald has shot wide of the mark in its resume of fifth district politics.

SKIVINGS.

Town meeting, June 2.
Sunday is Trinity Sunday.
Dramatic at Lyceum hall to-night.

An interesting letter from Dr. March this week.

The June magazines are delightful reading.

Queen Victoria will be sixty-one years of age on Monday.

Town clerk Seeley has licensed 250 dogs against 413 last year.

The official program for Decoration Day will be found elsewhere.

Mr. Eph Cutter has arranged a good program for his organ recital next week.

The great London circus is coming to Woburn June 14, baby elephant and all.

Next Thursday is Corpus Christi, and the 316th anniversary of John Calvin's death.

The assessors want that little schedule of property filled and handed in by June 1.

Mr. Albert Gleason has added a soda fountain to his fruit stand on the post office corner.

Mr. J. H. Richardson was elected treasurer of the Mishawum club, Saturday evening.

Mr. E. F. Poole has been drawn juror for the U. S. circuit court, and is foreman of the jury.

You can be cool to your girl now and she won't resent it, especially if it is flavored with vanilla.

The dark horse of to-day may be a braying mule to-morrow, and a disappointed donkey the day after.

A couple of young foxes in a cage in Curtis's drug store window have attracted considerable attention this week.

Marriages in May are said to be unlucky, and some dippant person says that month is no exception to all the others.

The grand jury will attend the Unitarian church on Sunday to listen to a memorial sermon by Rev. George H. Young.

The republican national convention meets at Chicago June 2, and the democratic national convention at Cincinnati June 22.

A corps of boys, sons of soldiers, number about fifty have been organized to do escort duty on Decoration Day. A drum corps of seven is also in training.

Mr. S. H. Patten wishes it distinctly understood that he yields the palm to no one in the matter of making ice cream that is first class in every respect.

Mr. F. H. Lewis's annual concert will be given Monday evening, May 31, probably at the Congregational vestry; but the place has not been definitely decided upon as yet.

White vests will be worn this year but little, for they are not the correct thing for either a business suit or full dress, and are only permissible with a semi-dress Prince Albert coat.

A crossing from the depot to the horse-car stand would be a public convenience that would be appreciated by every one who has occasion to wade through the mud there on a wet day.

An exchange says that it requires as much courage to mount the first straw hat of the season as it does to storm a battery.

To ask a big-wigged, bald-headed old man for his own daughter.

Two Woburn ladies, Miss Hattie C. Bickford and Miss Sarah E. Spear, are going to Europe with the Tourist excursion party which leaves on the 29th of this month.

We understand these ladies also contemplate visiting the east and the Holy Land.

Messrs. J. E. Tidd, J. F. Leslie, Jas. MacMahon and T. D. Hevey have received their commissions as census enumerators for the town of Woburn. Get ready to tell your age to a big-wigged, bald-headed old man for his own daughter.

The Catholic fair was closed last night in Lyceum hall, and removed to St. John's institute, where it will be kept open to-night and tomorrow night, and two or three nights each week for some time thereafter.

Unity Court, Independent Order Foresters will be instituted on Friday evening, May 28, at Grand Army hall by officers from the state court. Their regular meetings will be on the second and fourth Friday evenings of each month.

"D. F." sends us a poem, but neglects to attach the author's name along with it. Does not "D. F." know that editors never publish poems without knowing the author's name? If he (or she) sends us his (or her) name the poem will be published.

Henry Young, Jr. has commenced operations on his new machine shop, which is to be located just above Mr. L. H. Allen's place on the road to the north, and is owned by the Leathe estate. The building is to be of wood, 30x70 feet, and one story in height.

In our police report of last week we spoke of one John Maguire, as the keeper of a "house of ill-fame." So we are glad to correct that statement. That house has not known John for a year, and has since his ejection been occupied by respectable tenants.

An organ recital will be given in the Unitarian church on Wednesday evening, May 26, by Mr. Eph Cutter, Jr., assisted by Mr. N. M. Brigham, tenor, and Mr. J. C. Buck, organist. Tickets 25 cents; three for 50 cents. For sale at the store of J. C. Buck and at the door.

The steamer was out for practice on Monday evening in the Highland district, when hose 5 handled the hose, and Wednesday evening on Clinton street, under the management of hose 6. The machine has been used in the Highland district, and it was to test it that it has been taken out this week.

Dr. Bartlett in his capacity of town physician and the board of health have been looking into the sanitary conditions of portions of the village this week, and report a condition of things not at all satisfactory in some localities. They will use their official authority to improve the drainage, etc., of several streets.

The birds, who have been busy in gathering food and other warm materials with which to line their nests, have now pulled off their ulsters and with a happy "chirrup" in their voices, are at work remodeling their domiciles into the usual cheerful and comfortable abodes of the summer.

A good garden will save you lots of store bills and supply your table with many luxuries you would not be likely to buy. It will pay in dollars and cents, in sensible and hearty enjoyment, in the satisfaction of friends and in health and happiness all around. It is worth working for an hour or two every day, but it cannot otherwise be had.

A new organization has been started in Woburn, viz: a court of Independent Order of Foresters. At a meeting Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected, and they will be installed on the 28th inst: Chief ranger, Thomas H. Hill; vice chief ranger, Alonzo L. Richardson; recording secretary, William H. Matthews; financial secretary, Albert P. Barrett; treasurer, Fredrick D. Merrill; senior woodward, William H. Hensley; junior woodward, William C. Coleman; senior beadle, George H. Ayer; junior beadle, John T. Hill.

The Phalanx will have a street drill next Thursday evening.

The Boston Herald's expose of the state of affairs in this congressional district made the knowing ones smile.

John Murphy living at Tyler's Block Main street, fell while climbing over a fence and dislocated and fractured his left elbow this week.

Wednesday was the 100th anniversary of the famous "dark day," one of the most memorable events in the history of New England.

The sum of $75 was contributed by the workmen in John Cummings's shop for the family of Mr. Orrin Sanborn, who died this week.

On Tuesday the national band attended the funeral of their late member, Daniel Burke, who died after a short illness of pneumonia, the first of the week.

The Methodist people are the first to inaugurate strawberry festivals. They are to have one at their vestry next Wednesday evening. A good time will be expected, and an invitation is extended to all to attend.

The travel over the Mystic Valley railroad is not so great this season as when the road was first graded. Several fences built across the road bed seriously interfere with the comfort of passengers over that route.

Thursday morning Sylvester Cutler's horse ran from J. B. McDonald's coal yard through High and Main streets to the common where he was stopped by a boy named John. On its way through High street the team struck a lamp post and broke it short off.

Mr. F. B. Pierce will open a stock of boots and shoes in the corner store recently vacated by the savings bank tomorrow night. Mr. Pierce will be glad to see all his friends at his new quarters.

The Merrimack chemical works at North Woburn are engaged in making still further improvements at their works. This is one of the largest, if not the largest, concerns in the country in its line, and we are pleased to record that its business was never more prosperous.

James Buel has commenced putting in the foundation for a wooden shop on the second of the one-story building on Buel's court, 47x25, with an L 25x15, the whole to be two stories. A brick boiler house will be built, and every precaution taken to make the establishment safe from fire.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Industrial society connected with the Baptist society, was held Thursday afternoon and evening. Supper was served at 6 o'clock, and an entertainment was given in the evening.

Brooks and Nellie True, piano soloists, Misses Nellie Platts and Ida J. McDonald, and singing by a chorus of young ladies. Miss True is a pupil of E. A. Pierce, and her readings are given by those who hear her as being excellent.

The last meeting of the season of the Social Beneficent society was held in the Congregational vestry on Thursday. The customary afternoon meeting was held, supper was served at 6 o'clock, and an entertainment was given in the evening.

The committee were appointed to investigate the matter of the National Sewing Machine company's project of moving their works to Woburn, and to report on its merits, and the report was so favorable that subscription papers were immediately opened for the sale of the stock of the company.

We understand that the stock is being taken up with but moderate alacrity, but hope that the merits of the machine and the advantages to be derived from having the factory here will become sufficiently apparent to insure the sale of the necessary amount.

Mrs. Page Eaton of this town is on a visit to her brother-in-law, Charles B. Eaton, at Guide Rock, Nebraska. Mr. Eaton has been located at that point for a year or more, where he is largely interested in sheep raising. His old townsmen will be glad to learn that this enterprise has been more than successful, and that the sharp advance in wool which has been maintained, will make the venture a very profitable one.

Sheep raising seems to be a very inviting field for enterprise, having been a long one which promises large returns for the capital invested, as it must be a long time before it will be possible for the supply to exceed the demand, especially when we take into consideration the fact that there has been imported into the Boston market alone since the first of January more than 30,000,000 pounds of foreign wool. This amount can and should be supplied by our own producers to the exclusion of the foreign article.

POLICE COURT.

F. L. CONVERSE, TRIAL JUSTICE.

May 15.—Last Saturday was a busy day at Judge Converse's office. The first appearance was made by one John Maguire, who had broken some glass in the front door of Higgins's saloon, and assaulted Henry Ferrin. For breaking the glass, the case was placed on file on payment of costs, satisfaction being given to the owner of the glass.

For the assault on Ferrin, John was asked to contribute to the exchequer of the state $5 and costs, which he cheerfully did.

The assault and battery business seems to have been a mutual affair, as Henry Ferrin was the next man to make his little bow to his Honor. He was charged with assault and battery upon the aforementioned John Maguire and also upon Edward Clafferty. On the first complaint Henry paid $5 and costs for his fun, and the latter was put on file on payment of costs, satisfaction having been given to the injured Clafferty.

May 18.—Ellis Dempsey excited more than the usual frailty of her sex by getting very drunk. In default of the payment of the $5 fine imposed by the court, she was committed for the regulation period of thirty days.

Annie E. McKay came square up to the rack and pleaded guilty to a drunk, and as she was penniless, she got the stereotyped thirty days.

NORTH WOBURN.

General Order for Decoration Day.

Post 33, G. A. R., will assemble at headquarters, Saturday, May 29th, at 9 o'clock, a. m., at the G. A. R. uniform, where barges will be taken and together with the Woburn brass band and a delegation of young ladies daughter of soldiers will proceed to Calvary cemetery at Montvale, where the following exercises will be observed: Dirge by the band, address, decoration of graves by comrades; after which returning to headquarters to be dismissed.

The Post will again assemble at Armory hall, at 2 o'clock, p. m., and under escort of a company of boys sons of soldiers together with the band and boys' drum corps will proceed to the cemetery via Main, Salem, and North streets, where the following exercises will take place: Dirge by the band, prayer, singing of selection by the comrades and boys, during which the band will play "The Star-Spangled Banner." After decoration of graves, the procession will reform, passing out the west gate by Charles street to Main, Franklin, Winn, halting at G. A. R. hall, where it will sit down to a G. A. R. meal, and then proceed to the cemetery by voluntary contributions by the members of the order and invited guests.

Comrades will re-assemble at the G. A. R. hall, at 7 p. m., together with the Ladies' Auxiliary corps and band, and march to Lyceum hall where the following program will be carried out: Music, selection by the band; reading of order by committee; prayer by Rev. Mr. Young; singing of "America" by the quartette of male voices; address by senior vice-commander T. H. Hill; selection by the quartette; singing of "America" by the audience, accompanied by the band; benediction.

By order of ALONZO L. RICHARDSON, Post Commander.

Official: JOHN S. MANS, Adjutant.

Appetite.

The sermon on the above topic which Rev. George H. Young preached some time since on a stormy Sunday morning to a small audience was repeated at the Unitarian church Sunday evening. Mr. Young took his text from Proverbs xxiii: 31: "Be not drunk with wine, when thou art at dinner."

He said that man was naturally a compound of good qualities, and had not a natural trait that could well be spared. Human weal depends upon the perfecting of the faculties; the want of one of the faculties is the partial or incomplete development of some faculty or quality that at its best and truest must be as great a good as it had proved an injury. It is possible, he said, that the perfecting of the faculties is the greatest problem we have to deal with. The greater part of the religion of the day tends to develop the emotional nature rather than the moral or ethical, and so gained for himself the infamous memory of the man that "made Israel to sin." Just beyond, and in the direction of Dan, is the snowy height of Mount Hermon, rising so high that it can be seen at Jaffa as far south as Jerusalem. The snow fills up the deep gorges, but the ridges of the mountain are bare and black. Right under Hermon is one of the three fountains of the Jordan. It is a strong belief of the Jews that the water of the fountain flows out of the mountain, and is used for drinking and for washing. Another and larger fountain bursts up under a large oak which I see on the hill of Dan. The other was under our tent where we encamped last night. The people of the land were told that the water of the fountain was good for drinking and for washing. Right under Hermon, behind a low ridge which I see as I write, is Casarea Philippi, where we encamped Friday evening. There after made his great confession of Christ, and there Christ declared that on the rock of such confession he would build his church. Many suppose that on the heights of Hermon above was the transfiguration. From Casarea Philippi Jesus went with his disciples on his last journey to Jerusalem, passing, as I suppose, over the same path that we traveled yesterday, and that we expect to resume tomorrow on our way to Jerusalem. And when Jerusalem was destroyed, the Romans came up this very road, in sight of the oak where I am writing, passed on to Casarea and then Titus compelled the Jewish captives to fight with beasts and with each other, also to make a holiday for the inhabitants of the voluptuous and pagan city. So we are now fairly upon the ground of the gospel story. Tomorrow we hope to reach the sea of Galilee.

Since I last wrote to you we have passed through the wildest and most magnificent scenes in Lebanon. We have descended three thousand feet since we left Zahleh, and the weather has been a glorious change, and the fields greener all the way. The barley is bearded in the fields around me, and the wheat is very green. There is no house or village near us, but down upon the plain and in the valleys many villages and towns are clustered of earth and stone cabins. With a field glass we can see many children entirely destitute of clothing, and men and women looking no better for the weather. The people are poor and desperate in their looks, and their voices are harsh and seem like threatening. But my son tells me what they say, and I find that they always speak words of welcome. Once at Zahleh, looking across the valley, I saw my son's horse, and then caught him by the arm and spoke in tones that sounded like the most terrible threatening. And when I came to ask my son what he said, I learned that he was making the most urgent request that we would go to his house and stay all night. Had it not been for my son's interpretation I should certainly have supposed that we were about to be attacked and robbed. We have been protected and blessed on our journey thus far. We endeavor to take every precaution against danger or exposure and then we commit ourselves confidently to the keeping of our heavenly Father. And we may be sure that he will give us protection and peace may be with you in your homes and occupations which we seek for ourselves in our journey.

Your affectionate pastor, DANIEL MARCH.

Boston Inside Out, by Rev. Henry Morgan. Shawmut Publishing Co. Price 48c.

For a most wholesome condemnation of some of the most noble laborers in the field of philanthropy effort for the fallen, and an animated account of the life of one of our noblest laborers to save a city from utter ruin, we commend this book as being without a rival in the whole range of literature which has come from the press. That great and serious evils abound in every large city like Boston, none will deny; but with all its sins, the man who, with all its paritan habits, charges it with being more corrupt than Paris, shows either his own ignorance or disregard of facts, and fails of accomplishing any good. For sale by Horton.

Women's work think.

If the crabbled old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best methods to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating it by keeping their families in perpetual health, at a mere nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Com.

Letter from Dr. March.

UNDER A LEMON TREE, APRIL 11, 1880.

To the Wednesday evening meeting.—I am here encamped for the Sabbath day. You are here for the Sabbath day, with me it is 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There is no one here for me to speak to except my son. We have talked over the scenes which surround us, our friends and home affairs. We have read the Bible story that carries us back to this place in the days of Abraham. I am so desirous that you should share with me in the conversation, that I take the slower process of sending my words over the sea. The weather is excessively warm. Our tent is open on both sides to catch whatever wind comes, but we wait in vain for the cooling breath. I have climbed the hillside and rested myself under the only tree that casts shade. The doves that make their home in the branches above me have fled at my approach with a wild cry of alarm, when I would only be too glad to have them stay and cheer my solitude with their cooing voices. My position at 16 miles overlooks the whole plain, marsh and lake called in the Bible the "waters of Meron." Just north of me on the plain in full view is the ancient Jewish city of Tiberias, the united force of the Canaanites under Jabin, king of Hazor. Hazor was probably under the hill where our tent is pitched, but no trace of the ancient city is left. Just above us, and a little way to the south, is the city of our camp, which is Kadesh, one of the ancient cities of refuge, set apart by Joshua for the escape of the man-slayer, that he might be safe from the avenger of blood till the judges had decided whether he was guilty of murder or not. The same Kadesh was the home of Barak, and there came Deborah all the way from beyond Bethel to arouse him and all the tribes of the north against the host of Sisera, which he had overthrown at the battle of Tabor, under Carmel. And when Sisera was defeated by the river Kishon and the chariots of his army sank in the mire by the sea, he fled northward on foot to Kadesh, and at Kadesh he was killed. There was found by the pursuing Barak, with the tent pin smitten through his temples into the earth, by the woman that looked and acted precisely as the woman that I see riding by under the hill below, sitting astride on her mule and carrying a child in her blue mantle behind her back. Northward, in full sight on the plain is the city of Tiberias, the united force of the Canaanites under Jabin, king of Hazor. points except Hingham and Downer Landing, where three trips will only be run. On Sundays only two boats will be run for the present. Capt. Chas. E. Good will command the Nantasket this season, and has looked well to her rejuvenation and ornamentation for the season's work. Chief Engineer Geo. H. Brown has overhauled her engine and boiler and placed them in first-class order. Mr. Fred. Reed has been promoted to the position of purser, made vacant by the retirement of genial Parker Whiton. Chief Officer Cornelius McCarthy and Quartermaster Chas. F. McCarthy retain their positions, and last, but not least, Capt. Wm. Beals will again resume control of the wheel as pilot.

Gentlemen's Dress.

We have given considerable space and attention to the styles and novelties of ladies' apparel this summer, especially their hats and bonnets, that it seems no more than fair to give the gentlemen their turn now. We thoroughly believe in the equality of the sexes, and as the gentlemen have courteously waited with their hats off for the ladies to have their fill of openings, and as the warm weather incites one to look over the summer suits and straw hats with a view of donning both, we propose to give them the benefit of our inquiries about the correct thing to invest in. If one is going to buy a new suit it should be done after due consideration of the correct styles and the bank account.

Coats are shorter than those of last season, and all coats for day wear button high; the rough cloth used for business suits are worn higher than the finer goods of semi-dress coats. Vests also button high to match the coat, showing only the scarf about the throat, and concealing the shirt front. All trousers are worn narrower. Semi-dress suits have the double-breasted Prince Albert coat made of black or blue cloth in diagonal or else corkscrew patterns; this is for church and for general wear, though young gentlemen prefer the single-breasted coat. Vests of same material and buttoned high, with or without collar to suit taste. The trousers are closer, and have narrow stripes or hair lines of medium colors. Business and traveling suits are made of Scotch chevrons in plaids, stripes, or mixtures of quaint colors. The entire suit is of one kind of material. The coat is either a single-breasted sack to button three or four buttons, or else the regular English jacket with flaps and pockets. The vest buttons very high, and the trousers are narrow. Dress coats are not changed in shape, but are worn shorter than last year. They are made as plainly as possible, without binding or cords; the vest of the same fine black cloth is cut low, like the coat, to button three buttons. White vests are not worn with full-dress swallow-tail coats, but are used in the summer with the Prince Albert frock-coats as part of semi-dress suits. White vests are usually double-breasted.

Shirts for dress wear will be white with the fronts laid perfectly smooth without tucks, and two eyelets for studs, instead of three formerly used when vests were cut lower. But very little jewelry is worn by gentlemen of taste. Sleeve buttons are of plain gold and worn linked, that the cuffs merely meet at the edge, and they are square-cornered and straight. New collars stand perfectly straight all around, without flaring, and meet close at the throat. Shirts for morning wear or traveling are of the French canaries in bird's-egg blue shades with white polka dots, or else white grounds with stripes, bars, and Japanese figures in colors. Madras cloth, Scotch gingham and chevion cloths are also used.

The Punjab scarf, folded flatly at the throat to fill the space not covered by the high vest, is made of washing goods, in one piece that can be laundered without injuring the shape. It is excellent when made of linen duck or of pique in solid colors, or with dots, stripes, or Japanese figures on white or cream ground. Rivaling this for summer use are neat ties of Scotch gingham, folded in four, each inch wide, when finished; these pass around the neck, and are tied by the wearer in a small flat bow, just as full-dress white ties are worn. The designs are the smallest bars and hair stripes, with a tiny border of contrast color, and either straight or fringed ends. The bird's-egg blue French canaries with white polka dots are made in similar ties. Satin ties, both black and white, are made in the same way, and sometimes lines of color are added at the ends, though all black or all white is in the best taste. The narrow black satin is used for dinner; white satin and white lawn ties are for full-dress receptions.

White linen handkerchiefs for dress occasions have narrow hems not half an inch wide, hemstitched, and otherwise very plain. Those for general use have wide hems of robin's-egg blue, or red, with polka dots; sometimes the centre is of the same color, and sometimes the whole handkerchief is of this quaint grayish blue. Colored hosiery is more used than white or ecru, and is chosen in narrow stripes around the leg, or else in solid colors embroidered on the instep or merely clocked on the sides. Balbriggan and lisle-thread socks are chosen for day wear, but silk socks, especially black silk, are used with low shoes and for full dress. There is no change in the shape of the buttoned gaiters that gentlemen wear on the street. They are made of calf-skin of light weight, with round toes and low square heels. English soles are worn with these, and the shoe is of symmetrical shape, without being tight, as the best-dressed men do not want their shoes to appear small.

The correct thing for a dress hat is a rather youthful and absurd looking affair. The crown is lower than usual and the brim narrow and well rolled. Business hats are low round-crowned Derby shapes, with narrow rolled brims. The most fashionable straw hat will be the Mackinaw, which is very soft yet rough-looking, with stiff straight brim. The English Dunstable straw hat will also be worn in the same shape. Soft felt hats in medium colors are shown in light weights suitable for traveling. Novelties in the way of gloves and canes are shown, and suspenders that will wash, called marseilles.

June Magazines.
HARPER'S MAGAZINE for June is probably the most beautiful number of that periodical ever issued. The opening article—a charming description, by Mrs. John Lillie, of a Devonshire Moorland village—is illustrated with nineteen remarkable pictures by Abbey. William H. Gibson, who wrote and illustrated "A winter idyl" for the March Harper's, contributes a paper on "Spring-time," which he illustrates with sixteen beautiful drawings, exquisitely engraved. Mr. Riding's admirable paper, "The work of a woman in New York," is finely illustrated by Jessie Curtis, Reinhart and Rogers. Mr. James H. Morse's quaint little poem, "The Errand," is illustrated by Fredericks. A paper, the second in series of "Old Dutch Masters," is devoted to Albert Cuy, with a portrait of the painter and two engravings from his pictures. J. Eglington Montgomery contributes a paper on the Thuringian valley, and its associations with Luther, finely illustrated. A timely article—apropos of the monument to Andre—is devoted to a biographic sketch of Captain Nathan Hale, by Henry R. Johnson, with an illustration. Two of which are from drawings by Howard Pyle. Nor is the humorous element wanting in this brilliant collection of illustrated articles. Sherwood Bonner contributes a side-splitting story entitled "Hyacinths Pop and the baby," which A. B. Frost illustrates with nine characteristic pictures. The number is remarkable for the co-operation of so many of our best artists in its pictorial embellishment. Apart from the illustrated papers, the number contains some very notable contributions, especially George Ticknor Curtis's article, "The Strong Government," which shows that the rich certainly have no reason to complain of the weakness of our government; "Ingratitude of the republic" a pointed arraignment of Congress for its neglect of the general officers of the army, written by one of our ablest Major-Generals; and Mr. A. B. Allen's article, "Beef and Bullocks," treating the subject of our exports of beef to Great Britain, and considering the best breeds of cattle to be cultivated for the foreign market. The curious narrative, entitled "A puzzle for metaphysicians," is contributed by Mrs. Harriette Woods Baker, daughter of Dr. Leonard Woods, the celebrated theologian. W. H. Babcock contributes a short story, "De Courcy's Ride." The editorial departments are full of timely and entertaining matter. Mrs. Corbett, the author of "Il Jacobo," contributes for the editors drawer another comic operetta, entitled—"The Gallant Garroter," which is illustrated by A. B. Frost.

THE BOSTON JOURNAL OF COMMERCE is one of the most valuable exchanges that comes to our table, and we have noticed with pleasure the great improvement which has been made since Mr. Thomas Pray, Jr. took charge of its editorial columns, and judge that this is only a prelude of still further improvements to come. Mr. Pray is a sort of rara avis in mechanical and manufacturing journalism, from the fact that he knows what he is writing about from a practical stand-point, and he has a common sense way of putting things that is refreshing. He is not only a practical manufacturer of textile fabrics,—the processes of spinning, weaving, dyeing and finishing goods being, as it were, at his finger's end,—but he is also a practical, mechanical, steam and consulting engineer of conceded ability, thoroughly posted in mill power, the running of steam engines, and the transmission of power, has had wide experience not only in this country but also in Europe, where a knowledge of the French and German tongues has enabled him to pursue his investigations in the very workshops of France, Germany and Austria. With these "bonanzas" of practical information to draw from, united with the perfect genius for the despatch of work, which Mr. Pray possesses, there seems to be no reason why the Journal of Commerce, under his management, will not take the lead of journals of its class in this country, and render it indispensable to every one interested in manufacturing, mechanical and commercial pursuits. There is also an able corps of experienced and practical men attached to the paper, and its manufacturing, mechanical, engineering and commercial departments are all fully and carefully handled. We are not surprised to hear that its subscription list is rapidly increasing, as it deserves to do.

I don't want that stuff, Is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At the first attack thereafter, it was administered to her with such good results, that she continued its use until cured, and she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.

Special Notices.

Card of Thanks.

I desire to return my sincere thanks to the many friends and neighbors whose kindness was so signally shown during the illness of my husband, and in connection with the sad obsequies of his burial. Especially have the marked attentions of his comrades of the G. A. R., and of his companions who for so long a time were his fellow-workers, and of the members of the church to which he belonged, as well as of the citizen public, served to mitigate the severity of the sorrow which has come to me, and to excite within me a gratitude which language cannot express. I would particularly thank all those who had part in making the generous gift of money which came to me at the hands of Mr. Cook. May the blessing of the God of the widow and the fatherless be on all these friends.

I don't want that stuff.
Is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At the first attack thereafter, it was administered to her with such good results, that she continued its use until cured, and made her so enthusiastic in its praise, that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.

This is to give Notice:

That on the fifteenth day of May, A. D. 1880, a Warrant in Bankruptcy was issued against the estate of George W. Allen, of Woburn, in the County of Middlesex and State of Massachusetts, who has been adjudged a bankrupt on his own petition; that the payment of any debts, and the delivery of any property, belonging to such bankrupt, to him or for his use, and the transfer of any property by him, are forbidden by law; that the petition was filed on the 31st day of August, A. D. 1878, to which date interest is to be computed; that a meeting of the creditors of the said bankrupt, to prove their debts, and to choose one or more Assignees of his estate, will be held at a Court of Bankruptcy, to be held at U. S. Court House, Boston, before Edgar J. Sherman, Esq., Register, on the 5th day of June, A. D. 1880, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

Containing a SUPPLEMENT of over 4600 NEW WORDS and Meanings, ALSO, A NEW Biographical Dictionary of over 9700 NAMES.

PICTORIAL DEFINITIONS.

For the great aid rendered by pictures in defining words, look at the pictures under the following words in Webster, each illustrating and defining the meaning of words and terms named:

Beef, page 120. 15 Moldings, p. 551. 10

Butler, p. 148. 17 Pharmacology, p. 982. 37

Castle, p. 34. 54 Exaltin, p. 109. 14

Column, p. 23. 36 Ships, p. 116, 121, 110

Eye, p. 58. 11 Six-aka Engine, p. 50

Moore, p. 60. 45 Timbers, p. 138. 14

Making 345 words and terms defined by the pictures above 12 words in Webster's Unabridged far better than could be done by any definition given in words.

Is there any letter and than Webster to help a family to become intelligent?

TOWN OF WOBURN.

TOWN WARRANT

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
MIDDLESEX, ss.

To either of the Constables of the Town of Woburn, in said County.

GREETING:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts you are hereby required to notify and warn the inhabitants of the Town of Woburn qualified to vote in town affairs, to meet at Lyceum Hall, in said Woburn, on Friday, the fourth day of June next, at seven of the clock, P. M., to act on the following articles, viz:

ARTICLE 1. To choose a Moderator to preside at said meeting.

ARTICLE 2. To see if the Town will appropriate a sum of money to repair or build a new House for Hook and Ladder Company, or do anything in relation to the same.

ARTICLE 3. To see if the Town will order, that all buildings belonging to the Town shall be insured against damage or loss by fire, or do anything in relation to the same.

ARTICLE 4. To see if the Town will accept the grade of Canal street, as reported by the Board of Selectmen, to conform to a plan drawn by John L. Carter, C. E., or do anything in relation to the same.

ARTICLE 5. To see if the Town will retain the present grade on Canal street, between Pleasant and Sturges streets, or do anything in relation to the same.

ARTICLE 6. To see if the Town will appropriate a sum of money sufficient to lay a twelve-inch main pipe for water, on Canal street, from Pleasant to Sturges street, or do anything in relation to the same.

ARTICLE 7. To see what action the Town will take with reference to two notes given by Rufus Pickering to the former Treasurer, for Highway labor, and Water rates, March 1, 1878.

ARTICLE 8. To see if the Town will rescind their former vote at annual Town Meeting, relating to leasing Lyceum Hall for a term of years, or do anything in relation to the same.

And you are directed to serve this Warrant by posting an attested copy at each of the Government Post Offices in town, and causing the same to be published in The Woburn Advertiser, and Woburn JOURNAL, seven days at least before the time of holding said meeting.

Hereof fail not, and make due return of this Warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk, at or before the time of holding said meeting.

Given under our hands and the seal of the Town affixed, this twenty-fifth day of May, A. D. 1880.

JAMES SKINNER, CHARLES BRESLIN, WILLIAM JOHNSON, WILLIAM F. JOHNSON, WILLIAM H. CONANT, ALBERT C. HAM, JOHN I. MUNROE, THOMAS H. HILL, Selectmen of Woburn.

Only Tent Show that will visit Woburn this Summer!

LOOK FOR IT!

First time of any Baby Elephant! First time of the Electric Light! First time of the only 15 Elephants!

WOBURN, MONDAY, JUNE 14.

The Great London Circus, and Sanger's Royal British Menagerie, united with the International 10 Allied Shows.

COOPER, BAILEY & CO., Sole Owners.

Only Great Confederation of Standard Exhibitions in the Universe!—First Baby Elephant ever Born in Civilization!

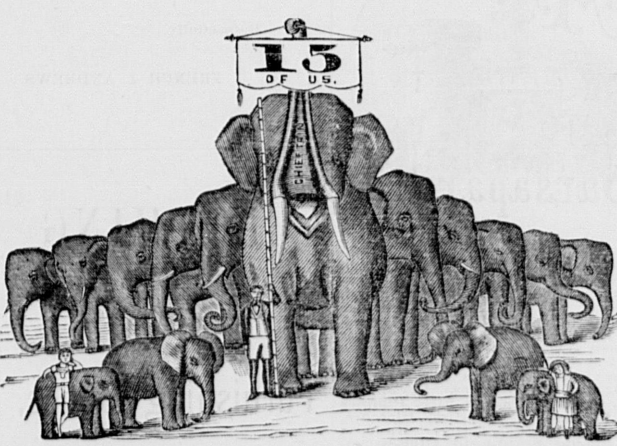

BORN IN PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 10th, AND WILL BE THREE MONTHS AND FOUR DAYS OLD WHEN EXHIBITED IN WOBURN.

$180,000 WAS OFFERED AND REFUSED FOR IT, which makes it more valuable than any other entire menagerie in the world. The last and only chance to see the BONANZA BABY to which the New York Herald, Sun, Boston Herald, Hartford and every newspaper of note in the world have devoted unsolicited columns, pronouncing it the GREATEST SCIENTIFIC EVENT FOR 2,000 YEARS.

$50,000 WILL be given for authentic record of an elephant born in bondage prior to this one. Father, mother and baby exhibited together without extra charge.

JUNE 14-- THE FAMOUS ELECTRIC LIGHT. No other has it. No other can have it. It makes a shadow of any other light, and this is the only show in the world lighted with it. Its brilliancy as far surpasses the dingy, oil-smelling lights of any and all others as the superiority of the great show eclipses and overshadows all competitors.

JUNE 14-- 4 PERFORMING DENS HYENAS, PANTHARS AND JAGUARS, lesson taught by brave men and women.

JUNE 14-- PERFORMING TEAM OF 6 FLOW OXEN, whose intelligence equals that of the horse. Tremendous pair of HUDSON BAY MOOSE, which leap 8 horses and trot a mile in 4 minutes, together with 60 dens of RARE ANIMALS, BIRDS, MONKEYS and REPTILES.

NO OLD TRAPS—no repaired Wardrobe and Wagons—all fresh and new as the fragrant breath of spring time. 20 BRAND NEW CHARIOTS and 30 TRAINED HORSES just imported. Every novelty rory with freshness and no old "trash" exhibited to the self-same audience half a dozen consecutive seasons.

20 CHAMPION CIRCUS PERFORMERS!

Headed by C. W. FISH, LINDA JEAL, and her FIRE HORSE, 12 GREAT CLOWNS and all the really great Artists of the arena world, supplemented and strengthened with the WOMAN FIRED FROM A CANNON, 100 feet through the air and entitled the "LATOUR LEAP FOR LIFE."

THE $1,00000 FREE STREET PACEANT

At 10 o'clock A. M., daily. The London inside, outside, all around and everyway is the greatest show on earth—"and don't you forget it." Ask anybody—even the little children—they will all say it is the best. DON'T FORGET THE DATE.

Excursion Trains are arranged for at reduced rates on all railroads. Two performances daily at 2 and 8 P. M. Doors open one hour earlier. The unequalled Free Street Pageant occurs daily at 10 o'clock A. M.

THE UNREASONABLE ANT.

Now and then, while we rested, we watched the laborer and at his work. I found nothing new in him—certainly nothing to change my opinion of him. It seems to me that in the matter of intellect, the ant must be a strangely overrated bird. During many summers now I have watched him,

when I ought to have been in better business, and I have never yet come across a living ant that seemed to have any more sense than a dead one. I refer to the ordinary ant, of course. I have had no experience of those wonderful ones, which work

keep drilled armies, hold slaves, and dispute about religion. Those particular ants may be all the naturalists praise them, but I am persuaded that the average ant is a sham.

I admit his industry, of course; he is the hardest-working creature in the world—when anybody is looking—but his leather-headedness is the point I make against him. He goes out foraging, he makes a capture, and then what does he do? Go home! No; he goes anywhere but home. He doesn't know where home is. His home may be only three feet away; no matter—he can't find it.

He makes his capture, and I have said; it is generally something which can be of no sort of use to himself or anybody else; it is usually seven times bigger than it ought to be; he hunts out the awkward place to take hold of it; he lifts it bodily up in the air by main force, and starts—not towards home, but in the opposite direction; not calmly and wisely, but with a frantic haste

which is wasteful of his strength; he fetches

up against a pebble, and instead of going around it, he climbed over it backwards,

dragging his booty after him, tumbles down

the other side, jumps up in a passion, kicks

the dust off his clothes, moistens his hands, grabs his property viciously, yanks it this way, then that, shoves it ahead of him a moment, turns tail and lugs it after him another moment, gets madder and madder, then presently hoists it into the air and goes tearing away in an entirely new direction; comes to a weed; it never occurs to him to go around it. No, he must climb it, and he does climb it, dragging his worthless property to the top—which is as bright a thing to do as it would for me to carry a sack of flour from

Heidelberg to Paris by way of Strasburg steeply; when he gets up there he finds that that is not the place; takes a cursory glance

at the scenery, and either climbs down again

or tumbles down, and starts off once more—

as usual, in a new direction.

At the end of half an hour he fetches up within six inches of the place he started from, and lays his burden down. Meantime

he has been over all the ground for two yards around, and climbed all the weeds

and pebbles he came across. Now he wipes

the sweat from his brow, strokes his limbs,

and then marches aimlessly off, in as violent

a hurry as ever. He traverses a good deal of zig-zag country, and by-and-by stumbles

on his same booty again. He does not remember to have ever seen it before; he looks around to see which is not the way home, grabs his bundle and starts. He goes through the same adventures he had before finally stops to rest, and a friend comes along

Evidently the friend remarks that a last year's grasshopper leg is a very noble acquisition, and inquires where he got it.

Evidently the proprietor does not remember

where he did get it, but thinks he got it from "him." Evidently the friend then frinds contracts to help him freight it home.

Then, with a judgment peculiarly antic (pun not intentional), they take hold of opposite ends of that grasshopper leg and begin to tug

with all their might in opposite directions.

Presently they take a rest, and comfort

together. They decide that something is wrong

they can't make out what. Then they go to it again, just as before. Same result. Multi-recriminations follow. Evidently each accuses the other of being an obstructionist.

They warm up, and the dispute ends in a fight. They lock themselves together and chew each other's jaws for a while; then they roll and tumble on the ground till one loses

a horn or a leg and has to haul off for repairs. They make up and go to work again in the same old insane way, but the crippled

ant is at a disadvantage; tug as he may, the other one drags off the booty and him at the end of it. Instead of giving up, he hangs on and gets his shins bruised against every obstruction that comes in the way. By-and-by, when that grasshopper leg has been dragged all over the same old ground once more,

it is finally dumped at about the spot where it originally lay. The two perspiring ants inspect it thoughtfully and decide

— The Y. M. C. A. are to hold a meeting at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon at five o'clock.

— One year ago tomorrow the so-called Prince Imperial of France was killed by the Zulus in South Africa.

— Rev. J. C. Bodwell has been installed as pastor of the Congregational church at Bridgewater.

— The graduation exercises of the high school will take place at Lyceum hall, on Wednesday afternoon, June 23.

— Jupiter, Saturn and Venus are morning stars this month; Uranus, Mars and Mercury being on duty in the evening.

— Thirty-three men of the Phalanx went to Boston Wednesday evening and participated in the battalion drill at the Institute of Technology.

— How much better is a quart of S. H. Patten's ice cream enjoyed at home than it is to spend the same amount of money for beer.—Com.

— Everything passed off quietly on Decoration Day. There were but few who got too much inspiration from the cup, and but one or two accidents.

— Mr. W. E. Taylor's business has so increased that he has been compelled to purchase a larger barge for his Winchester and Woburn route, and it will be put on the road soon.

— The anniversary exercises of the Woburn schools will commence on Thursday the 17th and continue until Friday the 25th, when applicants for admission to the high school will be examined.

— Mr. Henry Woods has left a fine, large and perfectly sound pair at the JOURNAL office, which he expects to give to the town as a memorial of last summer's crop in a useful case of preservation.

— Perhaps we owe the readers of the JOURNAL an apology for occupying so much space with advertisements this week, but we really had not the heart to withhold the handiwork of the man with a two-dollar ad in his hand.

— It is suggested that the baby elephant with the great London circus is eligible to the dignity of American citizenship without having to go through the formality of taking out naturalization papers, like the rest of its race in the country.

— The strawberry festival given by the Ladies' Relief corps at Grand Army hall on Wednesday evening was not so numerously attended as the ladies probably wished and hoped, though quite a goodly number dropped in during the evening.

— The selectmen and board of engineers are not disposed to accept the Central Square house from the contractor until some alterations are made in the building, by way of putting in some sound doors in place of the defective ones furnished.

— There was almost an audible smile at the First Congregational church Sunday, when it was announced that Dr. March would be home next Sunday, and it was evidently only the sacred character of the day and place that restrained the hearty applause.

— Henry Young, Jr., is at work in his new shop on Montvale avenue. This shop was located, built, and there were half a dozen lathes running in it inside of one week, which is pushing business with about as much vigor as is usually to be found in a country town.

— The stock of the National Sewing Machine company does not sell with the celerity friends of the project expected, and the factory located in Woburn could wish there was yet a fair chance of that much-to-be-desired consummation being attained. So say those who know.

— The Little Corinne opera company did not have an overflowing house on the occasion of their first night at Woburn last week Friday evening, and the show was financially a failure. The same opera was presented as when the company was here before, though not in so good a manner.

— Mr. J. E. Fowle and his sister were driving on Main street on Decoration Day when the band began to play and the horse got a trifle excited and overturned the carriage, but luckily did not hurt the occupants. Had there been more room for the horse to turn about in no accident would have occurred.

— From the sunny South were brought two little beings, who in their friskiness neglected all who saw them. But alas! from neglect or some other cause they came to premature death, and one of them, lying in a grave is inscribed— "Here lie the two little alligators who were slain by Massachusetts' broiling sun."

— The Baptist Sunday school will celebrate its sixty-second anniversary next Sunday evening. The exercises will consist of singing, reading of the Scriptures, the annual reports of the officers, a floral exercise and addresses by Rev. R. R. Riddell and Mr. Haskell, superintendent of the Woburn Sunday-school and Rev. E. Mills, the pastor.

— Last Sunday afternoon Rev. V. M. Simons preached a remarkable sermon before the Grand Army Post, which we shall publish in full next week. It was a forcible presentation of the views the speaker had been obliged to adopt by the logic of events the past fifteen years, and found an echo in the hearts of a majority of his hearers. Be sure and read it next week.

— Parties of Winchester hoodlums have been in the habit of visiting Woburn on Saturdays and on their way home have made considerable disturbance on Main street. The police have made up their minds to put a stop to the nuisance and bring the disturbers of the peace to justice. Saturday night officers McHugh and others gave chase to three or four of the precocious scoundrels who assaulted a boy near Pond street, but did not catch them. Some fine day the officers will win the race.

— The artist in soap connected with the advertising department of the great London circus was in town on Monday with the second advertising car of that show. He decorated several shop windows about town, and his work has excited much attention. The entire stock of implements used by the gentleman was a piece of common soap, with which he announced the coming of the wonderful baby elephant with great skill and almost instantaneously on the plate glass fronts of the clothing and druggist stores. The advertising force connected with this circus are perfect gentlemen, and quite an agreeable change from some advance agents we have had to deal with.

Town meeting this evening.

— Dr. March arrived home yesterday morning.
— The census enumerators commenced their duties Tuesday.

— House numbers 2, 3 and 4 are soon to be improved by a coat of paint.
— Owners of horses should read Dr. Moffet's notice in another column.

— An informal reception will be given Dr. March this evening at the church vestry.
— The inspection of the 5th regiment, M. V. M., is to be held on Boston common next Thursday.

— Dr. Lang will pull your poor teeth in the most approved manner, and then make you a handsome new set for a low price.

— If you have not yet put in the mosquito nettings it is time you did, for that lively and interesting insect is due about this time.

— The last socialable of the season by the Ladies' charitable society connected with the Unitarian church was given last evening at the church vestry.

— The water board charges the board of health $46 for water used in purifying a brook some time since. The two branches of town government should have a reciprocity treaty.

— It may cost you $100 if you refuse to unobtain to the census enumerators. It is a sort of governmental confession that while it screws your conscience it gives you no assurance of a happy hereafter.

— An early start on the duties of the day and vigorous pushing of them during the cooler hours of the morning, and a chance to "lie by" during the noontides, is a good way to get along with weather.

— Mr. A. W. Rice has left at the Journal office some of the crystalline mineral spring water of Stoneham, which is said to be very beneficial for the use of people afflicted with kidney or liver complaint and several other diseases.

— The board of health summoned Dr. Graves before the full bench the other day for not reporting the death of a person who had diphtheria; but the doctor showed the board that it was not part of his business to report any death, and further that the person named was not his patient at the time of her death.

— The police picked up a tramp of the purest water the other day. He lived as "near to nature's heart" as he well could, and his habits were those calculated to serve the purpose of the direct necessity only. He was about the filthiest, lowest specimen of humanity possible to conceive of, and made one shudder to think he belonged to the same species—as "a man and a brother."

— The band will give the following program at its first out-door concert, next Wednesday evening:

1. March—Signal Service, Swift.
2. Serenade—Pleasant Dreams, Ripley.
3. Schottische—The Soldier's Song, Bigger.
4. Overture—La Columbe, Bigger.
5. March—The Soldier's Song, Bigger.
6. Echoes from a Country Dance, Bigger.
7. Waltz—The Soldier's Song, Bigger.
8. Enraptured—Selection from Verdi's opera, Verdi.
9. The Flag, Reeves.

— The calendar seems somehow to have gotten out of this year, and given us a portion of July in May. The late and cold spring suddenly and without warning merged into the glory and beauty of full summer, and dame Nature has adorned herself with verdant and verdant as though the spring had been warm and early. These lovely robes of varied green she will wear "every day and Sunday," while they grow richer and more beautiful until their change into russet and gold.

— Mr. Geo. M. Chapman bought for the library of the city a collection of autograph letters at a sale in Boston last week. Among the distinguished names represented in the several hundred letters and documents are found George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Aaron Burr, Chief Justice Marshall, Henry Clay, Timothy Pickens, Alexander Hamilton, Gen. Winfield Scott, Albert Gallatin, William Wirt, Daniel O'Connell John Hancock, James K. Paulding, John P. Kennedy, Edward Randolph, Lafayette, John Pynchon, Gen. Gates, Philip Schuyler, Gen. Lincoln, Gen. Knox, Talleyrand, Judge Lemuel Shaw, Thomas H. Benton, Stephen A. Douglas, Richard M. Johnson, who was vice president of the United States, and many names that are familiar to every one as connected with the political or literary history of the country.

— No Surrender lodge No. 110 held a chapter of the Arch Temple degree on Wednesday evening, when brother Robert Cox, S. S., presided, and initiated two candidates into that degree. Delegations from state grand lodge, district lodge, Arlington, Boston and Malden were present.

— The Little Corinne opera company did not have an overflowing house on the occasion of their first night at Woburn last week Friday evening, and the show was financially a failure. The same opera was presented as when the company was here before, though not in so good a manner.

— Mr. J. E. — The artist in soap connected with the advertising department of the great London circus was in town on Monday with the second advertising car of that show. He decorated several shop windows about town, and his work has excited much attention. The entire stock of implements used by the gentleman was a piece of common soap, with which he announced the coming of the wonderful baby elephant with great skill and almost instantaneously on the plate glass fronts of the clothing and druggist stores. The advertising force connected with this circus are perfect gentlemen, and quite an agreeable change from some advance agents we have had to deal with.

Mr. Lewis' Annual.

— The annual concert of Mr. F. H. Lewis' piano-forte pupils occurred on Monday evening at the Congregational vestry. There was a large number of friends of the pupils present—enough to fairly fill the room—and the program, though necessarily long, was so well arranged, so promptly carried along and so full of such a variety of music, that it proved to be an enjoyable one to all.

— The playing of the pupils merited hearty praise and approval, almost without exception, and gave evidence of the careful and intelligent training which they were receiving under the hands of Mr. Lewis. The program was too long and the degree of advancement of the pupils too varied to admit of attempting to criticize or even mention every performer, and we shall therefore mention only a few of the more noteworthy pieces.

— The first of these was a grand march, played by Miss Barcroft, and the second a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the third a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the fourth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the fifth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the sixth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the seventh a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the eighth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the ninth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the tenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the eleventh a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the twelfth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the thirteenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the fourteenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the fifteenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the sixteenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the seventeenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the eighteenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the nineteenth a waltz, played by Miss Barcroft, and the PROPRIETORS OF AETNA LABORATORY.

Only Tent Show that will visit Woburn this Summer!

LOOK FOR IT!

First time of any Baby Elephant! First time of the Electric Light! First time of the only 15 Elephants!

WOBURN, MONDAY, JUNE 14.

The Great London Circus, and Sanger's Royal British Menagerie, united with the International 10 Allied Shows.

COOPER, BAILEY & CO., Sole Owners.

Only Great Confederation of Standard Exhibitions in the Universe!—First Baby Elephant ever Born in Civilization!

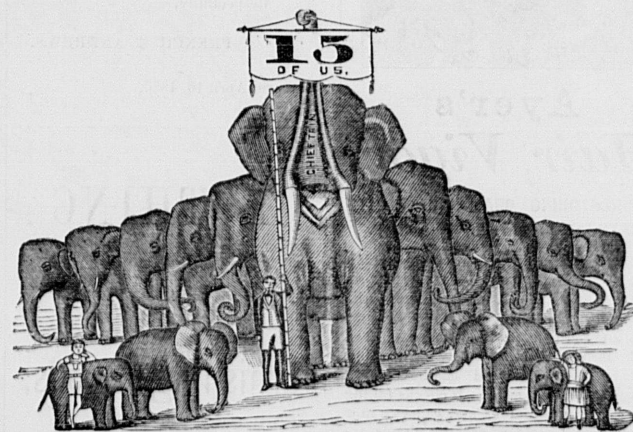

BORN IN PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 10th, AND WILL BE THREE MONTHS AND FOUR DAYS OLD WHEN EXHIBITED IN WOBURN.

$186,000 WAS OFFERED AND REFUSED FOR IT, which makes it more valuable than any other entire menagerie in the world. The last and only chance to see the BONANZA BABY to which the New York Herald, Sun, Boston Herald, Hartford and every newspaper of note in the world have devoted unsolicited columns, pronouncing it the GREATEST SCIENTIFIC EVENT FOR 2,000 YEARS.

$50,000 will be given for authentic record of an elephant born in bondage prior to this one. Father, mother and baby exhibited together without extra charge.

JUNE 14-- THE FAMOUS ELECTRIC LIGHT. No other has it. It makes a shadow of any other light, and this is the only show in the world lighted with it. Its brilliancy as far surpasses the dingy, oil-smelling lights of any and all others as the superiority of the great show eclipses and overshadows all competitors.

JUNE 14-- 4 PERFORMING DENS OF WILD BEASTS—TIGERS, HYENAS, PANTHERS AND JAGUARS, lesson taught by brave men and women.

JUNE 14-- PERFORMING TEAM OF 6 FLOW OXEN, whose intelligence equals that of the horse. Tremendous pair of HUDSON BAY CARRIAGE PAIR, WEIGHT AND BACKLASH, IS ALWAYS PERMANENTLY CURED BY ITS USE.

NO OLD TRAPS—no repaired Wardrobe and Wagons—all fresh and new as the fragrant breath of spring time. 20 BRAND NEW CHARIOTS and 30 TRAINED HORSES just imported. Every novelty rosy with freshness and no old "trash" exhibited to the self-same audience half a dozen consecutive seasons.

20 CHAMPION CIRCUS PERFORMERS!

Headed by C. W. FISH, LINDA JEAL and her FIRE-HORSE, 12 GREAT CLOWNS and all the really great Artists of the arena world, supplemented and strengthened with the WOMAN FIRED FROM A CANNON, 100 feet through the air and entitled the "LATOUR LEAP FOR LIFE."

THE $1,00000 FREE STREET PAGEANT

At 10 o'clock A. M., daily. The London inside, outside, all around and everywhere is the greatest show on earth—"and don't you forget it." Ask anybody—even the little children—they will all say it is the best. DON'T FORGET THE DATE.

Excursion Trains are arranged for at reduced rates on all railroads. Two performances daily at 2 and 8 P. M. Doors open one hour earlier. The unequalled Free Street Pageant occurs daily at 10 o'clock A. M.

Admission, 50 Cents; Children under 9 Years, 25 Cents.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE!
DR. RHODES'
ELECTRIC TRANSFUSING BATTERY.

THE ONLY BATTERY IN EXISTENCE capable of being CHARGED WITH MEDICINAL PROPERTIES, which can be TRANSFUSED INTO THE SYSTEM.

Invented by DR. G. W. RHODES, of Boston, Mass., who for twelve years has successfully used this treatment in the cure of

Paralysis, Brain and Nervous Diseases, and who is still practicing the same method at his office, 119 Marlboro St., Boston, Mass. Dr. Rhodes has at last yielded to the entreaties of some of our most influential citizens, and consented to allow this powerful electrical agent to be placed within the reach of the millions who cannot afford the time and money essential to electrical treatment. Whoever is subject to any of the following symptoms should wear the Battery: Paralysis, Brain and Nervous Diseases, Rheumatism, Gout, Swollen Joints, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Aches and Pains, Nervous and General Debility, Spinal Diseases, Weak Back and Side, Wasting Decay, Restless Nights, Nightmares, Melancholy, Dizziness or Vertigo, Fullness of Blood, Lack of Power, of Will, or Action, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Memory, Loss of Confidence, Fainting Spells, Hysteria, Epilepsy, Heartburn, Dropsy, Scurvy, Rheumatism, Weak Stomach, Flatulency, Diseases of the Heart and Lungs, Dropsy, Asthma, Pleurisy, Constipation, Jaundice, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Debility, Piles, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Fever and Ague, Liver Complaints, Diabetes, Kidney Complaints, Gravel, Chills, Loss of Manhood, Impotency, Seminal Weakness, Female Complaints, Disordered Condition of the Liver, Blood, Kidneys, or Urinary Organs.

DR. RHODES' PATENT ELECTRIC TRANSFUSING BATTERY is suspended from the neck by the means of a silver-covered copper wire, and rests upon the spinal column. Sent by mail everywhere. Price $2. Orders should be addressed to

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brassy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair
The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

A WORD

To the People of Woburn

We would inform the people of Woburn and vicinity that we have thoroughly overhauled and renovated the stock of printing material in the office of the Woburn Journal. Old type has been removed and old machinery discarded to give place to a large assortment of new and stylish type, a new job press, etc. Within the past week we have added one thousand dollars worth of new material to the already large stock, giving us facilities for turning out work in every particular equal to any city office, and at a less price. We do not intend to be beaten in quality of work, reasonableness of charge, or in promptness in filling all orders entrusted to us. We are prepared to furnish estimates for any kind of work, from the smallest label to the largest poster, and from the cheapest circular to the most elegant engraved wedding cards and invitations. We have also made arrangements with a large book-binding establishment whereby we can execute all orders in that line of business our patrons may entrust to us at the same price charged at the bindery, thus saving Woburn people all trouble except to leave their books or magazines at our office. If it is not convenient to call at our office a postal card addressed to us will secure the prompt attendance of a person competent to estimate upon any printing you may require. A full line of samples of Bufford's chromocards, wedding cards and invitations, business and address cards, etc., etc. We aim to do good work at a fair price, and on that basis solicit your patronage.

Respectfully,
FRENCH & ANDREWS.

Woburn, April 16, 1880.

PROBATE COURT.

To the Heirs-at-Law, next of Kin, and all others

Persons interested in the estate of James Dowd, late of Woburn, in said County, deceased.

GREETING:

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last Will and Testament of said deceased, has been presented to said Court for Probate, by Ann Dowd and Patrick Dowd, who pray that letters testamentary be granted to them, and that the executors therein named, and that they be exempt from giving a surety or securities on their bond pursuant to said will and statute.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the fourth Tuesday of June, next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioners are hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Woburn Journal, printed at Woburn, the last publication on two days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, George M. Brooks, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this third day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

Only Tent Show that will visit Woburn this Summer!

LOOK FOR IT!

First time of any Baby Elephant! First time of the Electric Light! First time of the only 15 Elephants!

WOBURN, MONDAY, JUNE 14.

The Great London Circus, and Sanger's Royal British Menagerie, united with the International 10 Allied Shows.

COOPER, BAILEY & CO., Sole Owners.

Only Great Confederation of Standard Exhibitions in the Universe!—First Baby Elephant ever Born in Civilization!

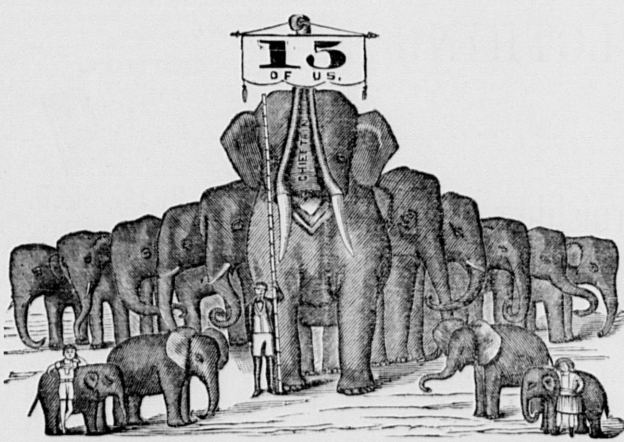

BORN IN PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 10th, AND WILL BE THREE MONTHS AND FOUR DAYS OLD WHEN EXHIBITED IN WOBURN.

$186,000 WAS OFFERED AND REFUSED FOR IT, which makes it more valuable than any other entire menagerie in the world. The last and only chance to see the BOXANZA BABY, to which the New York Herald, Sun, Boston Herald, Hartford and every newspaper of note in the world have devoted unsolicited columns, pronouncing it the GREATEST SCIENTIFIC EVENT FOR 2,000 YEARS.

$50,000 will be given for authentic record of an elephant born in bondage prior to this one. Father, mother and baby exhibited together without extra charge.

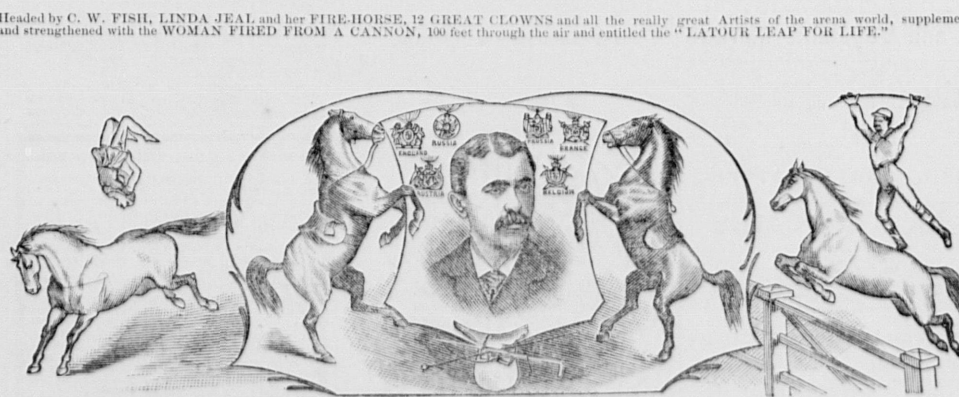

JUNE 14-- THE FAMOUS ELECTRIC LIGHT. No other has it. No other can have it. It makes a shadow of any other light, and this is the only shadow in the world lighted with it. Its brilliancy as far surpasses the dingy, oil-smelling lights of any and all others as the superiority of the great show eclipses and overthrows all competitors.

JUNE 14-- PERFORMING TEAM OF 6 PLOW OXEN, whose intelligence equals that of the horse. Tremendous pair of HUDSON BAY MOOSE, which leap 8 horses and trot a mile in 3 minutes, together with 60 dens of RARE ANIMALS, BIRDS, MONKEYS and REPTILES.

NO OLD TRAPS—no repaired Wardrobe and Wagons—all fresh and new as the fragrant breath of spring time. 20 BRAND NEW CHARIOTS and 30 TRAINED HORSES just imported. Every novelty rosy with freshness and no old "trash" exhibited to the self-same audience half a dozen consecutive seasons.

Headed by C. W. FISH, LINDA JEAL and her FIRE-HORSE, 12 GREAT CLOWNS and all the really great Artists of the arena world, supplemented and strengthened with the WOMAN FIRED FROM A CANNON, 100 feet through the air and entitled the "LATOUR LEAP FOR LIFE."

Double there are but few among us to-day, who can bring to mind the tall, slender youth, whose memory the portrait, now deposited in the armory, commemorates, as one of the fallen heroes of the war. Among those who enjoyed the honor of his acquaintance and friendship he was highly esteemed while living, and his death was a severe loss to the community. He was a man of high character, tenacious of purpose, determination to accomplish all that he undertook, solid integrity and purity of motive, as evinced in his youthful career as a student, contending with untoward circumstances before which one less persistent and conscientious might well succumb, gave promise of a future career which would enable him to make his mark in the community about him. KATIE.

(THE YOUNG GENTLEMAN FROM THE CITY SPEAKS.)

Sweet Katie, standing by the gate,
With downcast eyes and blushes warm;
The very spirit of the spring
Is all embodied in your form.
You tender blossom of the year,
With sunshine captive in your hair,
Did Nature lavish all her wealth
To make you young and pure and fair?

I fancy you in satin sheen;
I fancy you in marble halls;
The proper cage for such a bird
Has velvet hangings on its walls.
I fancy that your heart is mine,
And mine each golden, silky hair;
And that in mine your hand still lies,
And answer every soft caress.

But stop! who's coming up the hill?
A bumpkin on his homeward way,
He drives the plough in yonder field,
And feeds his pigs at close of day.
What is that light in Katie's eyes?
What has my fancy been about?
The dainty lips I dreamed were mine
Are tendered to a country outh!

My son, enjoy yourself. Have a good time, pleasure is eminently right and proper, but a good time isn't secured by a headache that lasts all the next day. The simplest pleasures are the most lasting. After you have spent two years in Europe you will come and sit down at your own fireside and think of a picnic you went to one afternoon in June that cost you just sixty-five cents. The "good times" that you don't take your wife to, my son, that you would like more than have your sister know about them, the goodness of them never comes back to refresh you and gladden your heart as does the memory of that sixty-five cent picnic, when you chatted nonsense with the girl you loved; laughed in the leaves rustle, because you couldn't help it. The "good time" that wakes in the morning and wonders where it was and who saw it and where all its money has gone; the good time that tails itself off with a headache—there's precious little fun in that. And it only takes a very little bitterness of the past. It doesn't take many such good times, my boy, to mingle tears with your bread and gall with your drink. The sting is the smallest part of the bee, but when you pick him up by it, though the rest of the bee was as large as an omnibus horse, yet would the sting outweigh all the good, sweet, harmless, honey-laden body, and you would think about it often and longer—Burlington Hawk-eye.

He Meant Business.

One of these timid young men who can never work up sufficient courage to even hint at marriage to a girl, had for months paid addresses to a beautiful damsel in the suburbs of Quincy. The object of his adoration expected the momentous question at each visit, and had thoroughly rehearsed her part, but visit after visit went by and the proposal came not. One day he sat in a park near the city, and the girl's father, who had been to the city, came and sat down by him. He looked at the girl and said, "Why, father, and the lover turned pale and began to look for his hat. Giving his hair a twang, the old man said: "Tom, do you want to marry her?" "Why, sir, indeed, sir—" "None of that, confound you—yes or no," roared the parent.

"Well, sir, yes, yes, I do!" Turning to the girl, the old man said: "Martha, do you want him?" "Yes, pa!"

"That, now! I've done in just half a minute what it took you silly fools a month to get at. Now struggle up again, an go to talkin' about housekeepin'!"

And the old man went back to bed, and was soon dreaming of a future son-in-law.

They were playing a game they call euchre. She held both bows and the king, and two aces of another suit, but she was a novice at the game. A young man who was teaching her looked at her cards and exclaimed, warmly, "What a lovely hand!" She looked him straight in the eyes and murmured, "You may have it, if you want it." "All the rest of the evening he wondered if he was the victim of a leap year proposal.

"Every man," said Mark Lemon one evening at his club, "has his peculiarities, though I think I am as free from them as most men; at any rate, I don't know what they are." "Nobody contradicted the editor of Punch, but after a while Albert Smith asked, "Which hand do you shave with, uncle?" "With my right hand," replied Lemon. "Ah," returned the other, "that's your peculiarity; most people shave with a razor."

As a substitute for newspapers at the Royal Turkish palace, sixty spies are employed to hang about the bazars and streets, attending as much as possible to everybody else's business, and to bring to the sultan's regularly their budgets of small talk and gossip, while five professional talkers are always on hand to retail the scandal thus collected to the royal ears.

A young man dressed in the height of fashion, and with a poetic turn of mind, was driving along a country road, and upon gazing at the world which skirted the highway, said, "Oh, how I would like to have my heated head in those cooling waters." An Irishman, overhearing the exclamation immediately replied: "Bedad, you might have it there and it would be sink."

In one of the recent strikes an employer was using his best eloquence to convince the workmen how wrong they were. "You do the work, it is true," said he. "That is labor. I pay you wages for your work. That is capital. My interests and your interests are identical." "Yes," shouted a workman, "about as identical as the interests of a milkmaid and a cow."

It was a colored preacher who said to his flock, "We have a collection to make this morning, and for the glory of heaven which ever of you stole Mr. Jones's turkeys don't put anything on the plate. One who was there says: 'Every blessed nigger in de church came down wid de rocks.'"

The Toledo Blade denounces the English sparrow as "a swaggerer, a boaster, a liar and a caucous pucker, a frequenter of free lunches, and a dead beat generally. He has no domestic virtues, and is as devoid of public spirit as a defeated candidate after a county convention."

"When I goes a-shopping," said an old lady, "I aller ask for what I wants, and if they have it, and it is suitable, and I feel inclined to buy it, and it is cheap, and can't be got for less, I most allers take it, without clapping all day about it, as some people do."

No one should make sport of love. The chap who can't love for all he's worth when he's young is the man who grocers compel to pay cash down when he is old and bald-headed.

The Shortening Days.—It is only a minute, but no one, says the Providence Journal, can think of the fact without a sigh of regret for the atom of anticipation of the cold and storm that will, in a few months follow the sun's retreating steps. Everyone mourns over the first minute of decreasing daylight. It may be that the intellects of our forefathers—of the Saxons and ancestors, who made the winter solstice and the return of the sun to the northern climes the great day of the year, marking its advent by the lighting of bonfires, and by the people taking could invent. They were near to nature in those days. They watched the movements of the great luminary, and, finding that for several days at this season the sun stands still, and that there is no change in the length of the days, they said, "the sun stood still," and from this observation made up the word "solstice." More than a century ago, when the people of that form of expression, though intelligent children know that the sun stands still all the year round, when considered as the centre of the system, and that it is the position of the earth, which is inclined to the rays of the sun, that causes the long days of summer and the sun's apparent advance northward.

— The rose-bug is a familiar and thoroughly social being. He does not promenade the back of your neck in search of plunder, or investigate the recesses of your ear in quest of food; his calls are entirely of a social nature, and when you carefully but firmly inform him that his visit is at an end, he appears no more contented and placid after your foot is raised off of him than when he tucked his wings under his water-proof after coming to anchor on your neck.

E. D. Hayden, Esq., made a brief address upon taking the chair, saying he was very hopeful for the success of the party at the polls next fall, and was glad the democrats had nominated so good a man as General Hancock, as it would take the campaign out of the hands of the mud-throwers of both sides and compel a square, stand-up contest upon principles and records. Remarks were also made by Col. W. T. Grammer and others.

pleasing and gave good satisfaction to the numerous friends present. During the hearing of one of the recitations Mr. French was surprised at receiving a Russia leather pocket book from the members of his school. Mr. Henry B. Wood at his school was also made the recipient of a beautiful vase.

Without feeling the necessity that rest upon committees when they close schools to indulge in flattery and praise, it may truly be said of Woburn schools that though Haunted Me.

Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years caused by a sick family and large bills (or doctoring) which did no good. I was completely discouraged until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and no one has been sick a day since; and I want to say to all poor men you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost.—
Workingman.

The second story of the Brown-Stan block is to be occupied as follows:—The front room, corner of Main and Pleasant streets, by the Savings bank; two rooms next on Main street by Dr. John S. Flag for dental rooms; large room at end next Thompson estate by the public library, being divided to accommodate reading room, delivery room and proper cases for books.

It is only a minute, but no one, says the poet, feels the time passing. There is not without a sigh of regret for the atom of lost sunlight, nor without a shudder in anticipation of the cold and storm that will follow a few feeble, following steps. Every minute pours over the first minute of decreasing day. It may be that we inherit this feeling from our Anglo-Saxon ancestors, who, when the winter comes, expect to return the sun to the northern climes at the great day of the year, marking its advent by every way of rejoicing which their simple tastes could invent. They were not so, however, in the East. They were not so, even the movements of the great luminary, and, finding that for several days at this season of the year there was little perceptible change in the position of the sun, they said, "the sun stood still," and from this observation came up the word "solstice." More prosaic modern observers retain the old idea, and, not knowing that the sun stands still all the year round, when considered as the centre of the system, and that it is the position of the earth which changes, they say that the sun, that causes the long days of summer, and the sun's apparent advance northward,

If there is anything people admire much more than the fine and sedate behavior of Mrs. Grundy, it is the person who will extol independence of character to your face will very likely think it at sufficient excuse for socially ostracizing you that you prefer personal comfort to following some one of the silly mandates of fashion.

The communication in another column regarding the elocution of the pupils of our high school is not without its germ of truth, though it may be the writer's ears were a little too acute to perceive defects. It is not that the public school children are taught to speak clearly and sufficiently loud to be heard distinctly. For the ornamental elocution that is affected by the army of would-be public readers there is no place in the curriculum of our public schools.

room next to it in the rear by George S. Littlefield, Esq., as a law office, and George W. Spurr as insurance agency. The other room facing on Pleasant street is not yet engaged. The bank room is expected to be ready for occupancy by July 1. A new safe made for the bank is nearly ready to be placed in position.

The town clock is subject to great variations. Sometimes it is three minutes ahead and again five minutes behind. Some arrangement should be made to take the watchmaker to furnish the standard time and have the clock set at least once a day. It is exceedingly annoying to the good citizens who rely on its truthfulness to find the B. & L. train leaving them behind.

Robert C. Metcalf will address the temperance meeting next Sunday. An interesting meeting may be expected.

Twombly & Sons have their usual assortment of plants this season and their rose bushes are really a wonder to look at. S. W. Twombly takes chief charge of the greenhouses and his genial smile always welcomes his friends on their visits to his establishment. The capacity of the house is increased and preparing the same at the Boston place of business.

A wall on High street opposite the land of William Boynton is being laid by the town, where the digging of the street has left the ground unsupported.

Repairs of school houses are now in order, and the prudential committee has a chance to earn his salary.

Quite a discussion is going on whether it is right for the graduating class of the high school to have a part of their reception devoted to dancing. As the class will then be no longer members of the school we feel to see how the school committee can restrict them to any particular exercises, and as there are many of their friends who like to dance why shouldn't they be allowed to? Those who don't dance are not to be considered.

A band from Lowell is to furnish music for the graduating exercises at the high school and for the evening social.

The strawberry festival at the Baptist church was largely attended on Tuesday evening. A musical program was given in addition to the feast of berries.

Leone S. Kimbly reports that two burglars attempted to break into his house last Tuesday evening.

CERTAIN DANGEROUS TENDENCIES IN AMERICAN LIFE. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 298. $1.25.

The name of the author should not be withheld from so valuable a book as this. The numerous changes which the civil war and the immense accessions to our population from such a variety of people, added to the most reckless speculation and extravagance known, with the financial crash which followed are here described very fully. The great evils which threaten the welfare of our country arising from these changes are too serious to be lightly passed over and demand the closest attention of every well wisher. We might take some exception to the author's belief that the standard of true and spiritual religion has been lowered, as we firmly believe that the world is improving in all that tends to make man better, and our country with all its sins is no exception to that rule. But we fully agree with him in the need of a larger and more liberal and more generous doctrine of reformers, whose creed and aims he gives, which if adopted by any large number would destroy all good government and throw society into a state of chaos and ruin to be never again contemplated.

BALLADS AND LYRICS. Selected by Henry Cabot Lodge. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 125. $1.25.

This collection is intended for boys and girls from twelve to eighteen. In this class of readers will be found such a wide variety of age, capacity, and disposition that a selection has been made to meet the wants of all. Subjects have been taken from the "Soldier from Bingen" and the "Old Sargent" to Milton's "L'Allegro" and the plays of Shakespeare. This praiseworthy attempt to create in the minds of the young a taste for good poetry should meet a warm reception from all interested in education, and we see no reason why it should not be used in all our schools of the grade for which it is intended.

AMERICAN PROSE. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 424. $1.25.

A very choice selection from Hawthorne, Irving, Holmes, Emerson, Lowell, Whittier, Thoreau and Longfellow, by the Editor of American Prose. While not professing to give the works of any one of these gifted authors to any extent, he has selected those best adapted for his purpose, which is to set before the reader some of the higher forms of prose art, as interpreted by American writers. It is intended particularly for students, and as a companion volume to Ballads and Lyrics, published by the same firm, ought to be in the hands of every scholar old enough to understand them. By using these a wish will be formed to possess the entire works of each of this array of the best writers of our country, and the result may be to bring out talents which have for them might have ever lain dormant. All having charge of schools will do well to examine these two volumes with a view to add them to the list of books needed.

WIDE AWAKE for July is full of special attractions for the month, chief among which shines out a brilliant illustrated and graphic paper by Mrs. Mary Wager-Fisher, entitled "The Philadelphia Newsboys and their Annual Fourth of July Dinner," describing the annual festival given by the George W. Child on Independence Day. Laura Leavard's "Hippety Ho," "Jonathan's Fourth of July," by Elizabeth Cummings, will suit the little boys, and "Some Bad Boys of Bygones," will serve the same purpose for their big brothers. There is also a capital "Fourth" Marching Song, with music, by Louis C. Elton. "Broadway Play was Acting" by J. R. Roper, will be of interest in this season of broadening exercises. The "star" story of the number, however, is an historical one by Mrs. Lizzie W. Chapman, entitled "Sally's Seven-League Shoes," for which "Champ" has drawn a fine frontispiece, with two smaller illustrations. The second of Miss Harris's papers on "How We Went Bird's Nesting," is given with three beautiful full-page illustrations by the same artist who draws the charming "Nursery Tales" for this magazine. J. G. Francis illustrates in his inimitable manner a poem by Susan Hartley, entitled "Rough and Ready's Doings." "Five Little Peppers," the little folk's serial, has three of Jessie Curtis's best pictures, and "Two young Homesteaders" has come to scenes of intense interest. The "American Artists' paper" is about Mr. Lafarge, and has a portrait of the artist at the age of twenty, painted by himself, also three other fine illustrations. This number of the magazine, in fact, is quite noticeable in the matter of pictures, and is no less than four, viz., Miss Louise M. Alcott, Mr. Bronson Alcott, Mr. George W. Childs, and Mr. Lafarge.

St. Nicholas for July has a patriotic flavor appropriate to the season; and, in an article written and thoroughly illustrated by Mr. Daniel Beard, it tells the boys and girls how to celebrate the Fourth of July with "Paper Balloons"—how to make them, and how to send them up with safety to both adults and children. The frontispiece illustrates a stirring incident in the revolutionary war, young "Elizabeth Jane Saving a Fort." There is a picture, by J. E. Kelly, of the heroic deed of a young dragon, one of Phil Kearney's famous "Twenty," in the Mexican war. The career of the brave and noble Montgomery, one of the generals of the revolution, is told by George J. Varney, who writes of him and the Canadian Patriots of 1775. Mary Wager Fisher's story of "Tom's Anti-Fire-cracker League" suggests a pleasant way for live boys and girls to celebrate the "glorious fourth." A white silhouette picture, by L. Hopkins, shows how modern young America would like to pay compliments to Liberty. Miss Loretta P. Hale contributes another paper about the doings of the famous "Peterkins." There is a short story of life in a southern state, by Frank R. Stockton, with a picture by W. C. Fitter, of all that a flood left of "One tree Island;" another of life in Australia; an illustrated tale of life in England, telling of "How Little Party saved her Mother;" and a story of a small but lively little New England chatter-box, entitled "Dame Darden and Little Mr. Babe." Number IV. of "The Major's Big-talk Stories" tells of "A See-saw in an Elephant-pit," and has two pictures by H. McVicker. Of the two series, both illustrated, "Jack and Jill," by Louisa M. Alcott, has this month an installment of strong and tender interest, and "The Fairport Nine" boys of Noah Brooks organize a military company, in a banner presented to them by the ladies of Fairport, and have an exciting time among themselves while building a camp in the woods.

Sanitary Suggestions.
Last Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Young preached a sermon upon the "Religion of the Body," at the Unitarian church, and below we give a short extract from it. We regret that the capacity of the Journal does not admit of the publication of the whole discourse.

A noted English writer, who seems to know whereof he affirms, has written a book called "The Ministry of Health," in which he very earnestly labors to show how generally our modern education is going far to produce a generation of weaklings. By careful tests he has fortified his position, and he asserts with voice of the authority of a wise physician that our modern graded schools with their system of making all pupils come to the same degree of perfection are doing a vast deal by undue urging, especially of girls who are to be the mothers of the future, to produce certain bodily weaknesses which will permanently enfeeble the race. Our education certainly ought to aim at a wholesome physical and hygienic, but I see so many evidences to the contrary that it seems to me our educators ought to start on a new tack. It is good to turn out pupils who are strong in their studies, but it is not good if it be at the expense of their bodily health. If your daughter graduates first in her class at high school or college what is her diploma worth if her standing is gained at the cost of some permanent physical ill? Or what matters it if the boy makes grand record for studious habits if gaining that record has made him an invalid? Along with our splendid modern educating we want more care for the body. If it must be, let us have less algebra and more hygiene, less Latin with less dyspepsia. We need everywhere vigilance in all matters which relate to bodily well. You see on almost all hands among intelligent people a gradual awakening to the importance of wholesome pure water; it is an indication of enlightenment in a very useful province. But if it is necessary that we care for this, who shall overestimate the need for purity of air? For health, we must breathe no putrid atmosphere. If about your home there be any influence to produce debility, you are imperiling health. You recall the poisoning in the great plague which was caused by exhalations from the walls which had been so many times repainted without removing the gathered sources which produced the ill. Improper ventilation and deficient drainage have been responsible for much, which has been called mysterious visitation of providence. The Southern city year after year is visited by the scourge, but those conversant with the facts say that the cause is apparent in the most fearful conditions of filth and disease; the festering corruption breeds disease and makes the march of death most easy. All these things are as much governed by law as is any range of human life and action. Disease goes where the conditions are fitted for it, and no great miracle is visited by scourge of cholera or fever save as by neglect of sanitary conditions the road is cleared for its march.

Any physician will tell you that the contagious diseases have freest run in those parts of towns and cities where ignorance, beastliness, and filthiness abound. Typhus has free reign where negligence of proper conditions of health has reared invitations for its approach. I walked the other day in a certain part of our town where the whole atmosphere was offensive; in carrying on business of that section a great mass of putrid matter had collected and was lying open to the air, vitiating the whole region and making it altogether probable that disease will spring up unless the conditions are changed. With the progress of civilization you see increasing interest in the matter of drainage, yet it is strange that communities are so slow to move in these things. A great town, increasing constantly in population, allows its soil to become so saturated with corruption that the sources of its water supply are contaminated and its atmosphere is tainted. Instead of carrying it away by sewers, the evil influence is allowed to breed illness and corruption right among the homes of the people, so that health is undermined and the death rate increased. It won't be so always, for civilization will sometime get so civilized that there will be large interest developed in all these concerns. We must not forget that if our bodies are to be fit temples of the Holy Ghost they must be made healthful, pure, and strong, and in order to do that, these conditions of which I have spoken are of infinite importance. All influences that tend to deteriorate must be put aside, all that contaminates must be done away with, all that has any power for ill must be given up.

Prejudice Kills.
"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of several of the best and most skillful physicians, who gave her various names but no relief, and now she is restored to us in good health as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had posited at for two years, being used by her. We earnestly hope and pray that no one who is so sickly suffer as we did, on account of prejudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters."—The Parents.

With the progress of civilization you see increasing interest in the matter of drainage, yet it is strange that communities are so slow to move in these things. A great town, increasing constantly in population, allows its soil to become so saturated with corruption that the sources of its water supply are contaminated and its atmosphere is tainted. Instead of carrying it away by sewers, the evil influence is allowed to breed illness and corruption right among the homes of the people, so that health is undermined and the death rate increased. It won't be so always, for civilization will sometime get so civilized that there will be large interest developed in all these concerns. We must not forget that if our bodies are to be fit temples of the Holy Ghost they must be made healthful, pure, and strong, and in order to do that, these conditions of which I have spoken are of infinite importance. All influences that tend to deteriorate must be put aside, all that contaminates must be done away with, all that has any power for ill must be given up.

JAMES PYLE'S
PEARLINE
GREAT INVENTION
FOR WASHING AND CLEANSING
In hard or soft water, WITHOUT SOAP, and without danger to the finest fabric. SAVES TIME AND LABOR AMAZINGLY, and is rapidly coming into general use. Sold by all Grocers; but beware of vile counterfeits. Its great success brings out dangerous imitations, but PEARLINE is the only one. Always bears the name of James Pyle, New York.

THE SEA AND THE MOON.

The Sea full in love with the Moon;
The Moon once laughed at the Sea,
And went on, turning midnight to noon,
And silvering billow and lee.

"Look down, lovely Moon," said the Sea;
"Behold your own beautiful face;
'Tis so pure and so charming to me,
In my heart I have given you place."

She looked, with a flush of shame;
The sea was her own image there;
And she knew—for a woman is vain—
That the image was spotless and fair.

Away sped the Moon in her splendor;
But not again she would turn,
With glance growing more and more tender,
To the sea, where her image did burn.

There trembled the silvery illusion;
The sea's image was there;
The throb of the Lover's soft confusion,
The throb of the Sea's faithful heart.

And the Moon would remember and ponder
The vision she saw in the waves;
As away round the world she would wander,
She knew that the Sea was her slave.

And month after month when returning
In her full she came to the shore,
Her face the ocean still burning
Gave the Moon a slight gleam of lore.

Still the sea followed sorrowing after,
His breast swelling over with love,
His eyes waiting only the laughter
Of the Moon sailing gently above.

Though ages on ages have perished,
Still Love follows the changes of time,
And with passion still diffidly cherished,
The Sea follows after the Moon.

Follows after till cruel shores stay him,
Then breaks his great heart with a sigh;
For the Faces ever mock and delay him,
Whose aim is unwise or too high.

July Magazine.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE contains the first installment of Henry James, Jr.'s new novel, entitled "Washington Square." The story opens in New York, and the scenes and characters are American. Blackmore's novel "Mary Anerly," draws near its conclusion. Mr. Black's yachting romance is continued, and a short story by Mrs. Latimer, entitled "Close Quarters," fills out a liberal complement of fiction. The illustrated articles in this number are of various interest, and there are nearly seventy illustrations contained in them. First in order is a brief but appreciative paper upon the character and works of the late William M. Hunt, by Miss Maria R. Oakley, embellished with a portrait of the artist, and copies of several of his pictures. Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis, in a paper entitled "By Paths in the Mountains," the first of a series of three, leads the reader through some charming and picturesque scenes in the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina, and seventeen excellent pictures, drawn by Charles Graham and Miss Jessie Curtis, place before the eye some of the most striking which Miss Davis describes. There is a breezy paper by A. A. Hayes, Jr., describing the romance and adventures connected with the old Santa Fe trail, and illustrated by Rogers; Mrs. Oliphant furnishes a biographical sketch of Queen Victoria, which is rendered specially attractive by portraits of the Queen taken at different periods, together with other portraits of the Queen's family; there is an anonymous paper on Princes and Potentates of 1840, also valuable for its portraits; and Col. Thomas W. Knox has an entertaining and well illustrated paper describing the experience of Summer Clubs on Great South Bay. Poems by Mr. Cranch and Miss Ellen M. Hutchinson, illustrated by Fredericks and Gibson; a comparison of American Colleges and German Universities, by Richard T. Ely; a valuable paper by Dr. John W. Draper, on Franklin's Place in the Science of the last Century; and the usually well filled and interesting editorial departments complete the table of contents. For sale by S. Horton.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY opens with a second paper by Mr. William C. Brownell on the Younger Painters of America, in which some account is given of the works of George Fuller, Wyatt Eaton, W. S. Macy, Frederic P. Vinton, George D. Brush and a half-dozen other young artists, together with copies of some of their most characteristic pictures. Mr. Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen writes with cordial enthusiasm of his countryman, the Norse poet and dramatist, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, and his sketch is illustrated with a portrait. A very timely and entertaining paper is Mr. W. H. Bishop's account of sights and scenes at Coney Island, the great pleasure resort of New Yorkers, the interest of which is heightened by a number of capital pictures. Gen. McClellan contributes a narrative of travel from Palermo to Syracuse, which is admirably illustrated by Moran, Riordan, Francis Lathrop and others. Mr. George M. Grant continues his description of The Dominion of Canada with a chapter upon the great Northwest which Henry Sandham illustrates with a dozen sketches; and Mr. Schuyler furnishes another installment of his history of Peter the Great, which contains several striking pictures. Dr. Alfred J. Leffingwell discusses the question, "Does Vivisection Pay?" and while admitting the valuable discoveries which have been made by it, argues against its wanton practice. Mr. Ernest Ingersoll furnishes a description of Denver, "The Metropolis of the Rocky Mountains"; Mr. John Muir, whose picturesque style in describing Western scenes and experiences is familiar to the readers of Scribner's, writes of "The Heart of the California Alps"; and Mr. George Parsons Lathrop writes of the opium habit and its consequences in an article entitled "The Sorcery of Madjoon," for which Francis Lathrop furnishes a striking picture of the Cobb's of a New York opium den. Mr. Cobb's serial is continued; there is an amusing sketch of negro character, in the "M. E. African," by Isabella T. Hopkins; Rev. Chas. F. Thwing writes of Japanese and Chinese students in America; there are poems by Clarence C. Buel, E. Allen Low, Laura Winthrop Johnson and others; and the six editorial departments contain much that is bright and readable.

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY opens with an article on The Interior of the Earth, by R. Radan, translated from the Revue des Deux Mondes by Guy B. Seely. The article sums up for the popular comprehension the conclusion of science on this subject. An article on "Changes of the Circulation during Cerebral Activity," by C. S. Minot, describes the experiments which go to show that the slightest change of emotion affects the circulation of blood in the brain. Prof. Tyndall's lecture on Goethe's Theory of Colors is concluded; there is a poem by Prof. F. W. Clark, "My Fire," which is pretty well crammed with geology and archaeology; Spencer's system of ethics is explained from a friendly point of view and with admirable force and clearness by Wm. D. Le Sueur; a lecture is given by Prof. Huxley, which recounts some of the incidents of scientific progress since the publication of Darwin's book on The Origin of Species; there is a fascinating and profusely illustrated paper on "Atmospheric Dust" by Gaston Tissandier; Henry W. Haynes discusses the question of The Fossil Man; Dr. Oswald writes of the faculty of animals for finding their way across bodies of water, and describes the laws of the distribution of plants; there is a third and final paper on Hysteria and Demonism; Prof. Muir writes of The New Chemistry as a development of the old; there is a sketch, with portrait, of the late Prof. Friedrich Mohr; and the editorial and miscellaneous departments cover a wide variety of topics.

A New York tramp named Nathaniel Baker has recently met with a great piece of good luck. After rambling about Long Island for some time during the past year, he strayed into a store at Mattituck and asked for food and work. The proprietor of the store got him a place with a widow named Reeves, who was worth $50,000 and had a well-stocked farm of 140 acres. She finally fell in love with Baker and married him, not all against his will, no doubt.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE! DR. RHODES' ELECTRIC TRANSFUSING BATTERY.

THE ONLY BATTERY IN EXISTENCE capable of being CHARGED WITH MEDICINAL PROPERTIES, which can be TRANSFUSED INTO THE SYSTEM.

Invented by DR. G. W. RHODES, of Boston, Mass., who for twelve years has successfully used this treatment in the cure of Paralysis, Brain and Nervous Diseases, and who is still practicing the same method at his office, 119 Marlboro St., Boston, Mass. Dr. Rhodes has at last yielded to the entreaties of some of our most influential citizens, and consented to allow this powerful electrical agent to be placed within the reach of the millions who cannot afford the time and money essential to electrical treatment. Whoever is subject to any of the following symptoms should wear the Battery: Paralysis, Brain and Nervous Diseases, Rheumatism, Gout, Swollen Joints, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Aches and Pains,
